VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Nutrient Management Advisory Board to the State Conservation Commission on Wednesday approved its own bylaws, but failed to define the role and purview of a state-certified nutrient management planner.

While the group did not stall in its efforts to deal with the task of reviewing proposals from the State Conservation Commission, which is to oversee the administration of the state's Nutrient Management Act, the board sent back for redrafting a proposal for "Interim Certification for Nutrient Management Specialists," and a proposal for "Interim Criteria for Nutrient Management Planning."

The redrafted proposals are to reflect the concerns and requests made during the board's second full meeting since being formed by legislation this summer.

The meetings are open to the public, because of laws which limit secrecy by public officials conducting official buisness, but they are not public hearings.

The format for a public meeting is such that the public may sit in audience, as space allows, but comment or disturbances are not allowed.

Public hearings are specifically held to gather general public comment.

The advisory board consists of 15 state residents who are either directly involved in production

Survey Of 1,200 Dairy Farmers Reported

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — A recent survey of more than 1,200 Pennsylvania dairy farmers casts doubt on the idea that producers want changes in federal dairy policy, according to an expert in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

"Recent news reports have claimed that dairy farmers are united about the need for supply management and other alternative dairy policies," said Dr. Robert Yonkers, assistant professor of agricultural economics. "But the majority of Pennsylvania dairy farmers support current U.S. dairy programs and oppose any type of supply management."

The survey investigated attitudes toward existing and alternative government dairy policies. Farmers were asked to choose whether current dairy programs should be eliminated immediately, phased out over five to 10 years, maintained as is, or modified. They also could respond with "no opinion" or "uncertain."

"Most farmers wanted either to maintain or modify both the federal price support program and the federal milk marketing order system as opposed to eliminating or phasing them out," Yonkers said. "A 2-to-1 majority wanted to keep the price support program. An even larger 3-to-1 majority supported the federal milk marketing order system."

Respondents also were asked to indicate their support for various alternative dairy programs. They could respond to statements about these policies with "agree strongly," "agree somewhat," "disagree somewhat," "disagree strongly"

MARTINSBURG (Blair Co.) — Frederick Farms of Martinsburg, a dairy farm with 85 registered and grade milking Holsteins, has set a precedent in herd production achievement that probably won't be equalled for some time.

Not only did the farm receive Pennsylvania Dairy Herd Improvement Association's top award for herd management, but individual cows on the farm topped the state's on-test Holstein production of protein and butterfat.

Another cow took second place

Northeast Chicken Parts

Wednesday, November 3, 1993

Trucklot buying interest was quite irregular and ranged fair to very good. Supplies of boneless skinless breasts with tenders were short of filling current inquiries. Trading was reported on both sides of 1.90 but the undertone was firm for immediate needs and fairly steady going into early next week. Supplies of line run breasts were tight with buyer needs for immediate deliveries not covered. Prices trended higher but some buyer resistance was noted. Dark meat items cleared satisfactorily. Wings were still unsettled. Lining up trucks to move product to the markets was becoming a problem in some areas.

Delmarva Broiler/Fryer Market

Wednesday, November 3, 1993

Movement of ready-to-cook whole birds remained about moderate. Offerings ranged adequate to fully adequate. Live supplies were moderate, instances light. Weights were generally desirable. Processing schedules were reduced at some plants but were still heavy in total. Less than trucklot asking prices were unchanged at 52 to 64 cents. Trade sentiment was steady. In the parts complex, breast items, particularly bone-in breasts were in short supply. Legs and leg quarters were in good balance. Wings were not as readily available from several plants, but were still slow to clear at others.

Notice To My Tobacco Farmer Friends
As you probably heard, I am no longer a partner in the Paradise Tobacco Auction but I still plan on supporting the auction by having a buyer in the line. However, I hear that some farmers are selling on the farm and would prefer to do so. For those that feel the price is right and want to sell, I will have a few different locations to receive for your convenience. Also for those that feel the price is not right or want Southboat to take care of part or all of your crop, feel free to contact us. Remember, I stayed with you through thick and thin the last eight years, now I ask you to stay with me.

The OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC THIS WEEK WITH

NOVEMBER 8-14, 1993

SADIE HAWKINS DAY, NOV. 13.

ON WITH THE CHASE!

We celebrate Sadie Hawkins Day on Saturday November 13 this year but it's not the anniversary of Ms Hawkins birth or death In fact Sadie Hawkins Day is from the mind of Al Capp creator of the Li'l Abner cartoon strip Capp conceived of a day in Dogpatch U S A when all the maids and spinsters could pursue (literally) their man If caught the hapless bachelor was required to marry the lady

Needless to say pandemonium erupted in Dogpatch

Interestingly Capp and his fictional world so captured the imagination of the country that Sadie Hawkins Day passed into the realm of modern folklore The first Sadie Hawkins Day was November 9 1938 but nowadays it's celebrated on a Saturday to accommodate the girls ask boys school dances

The woman that deliberates is lost.

TIP OF THE WEEK

Remove fresh paint from skin by rubbing with salad oil.

EARTHWISE

Many popular houseplants have been found to cleanse the air of toxins and pollution Some of the most effective plants and the substances they remove are Aloe vera (many toxins) English ivy (benzene) Ficus or fig trees (formaldehyde) potted chrysanthemum (general pollution, many toxins) and spider plants (formaldehyde) Be careful to hang the English ivy out of reach of small children and pets as its leaves can be toxic themselves if ingested

EASY POT ROAST

- 1 3-pound chuck roast
- 1 tablespoon vegetable oil
- 1 cup chopped onion
- 1 cup catsup
- ¼ cup Worcestershire sauce
- 2 tablespoons brown sugar
- 2 tablespoons cider vinegar
- 1 teaspoon salt

Brown roast in hot oil in a Dutch oven remove and set aside Saute onion in pan drippings until translucent Return meat to pan Combine remaining ingredients and pour over the roast Cover tightly and simmer for 2 to 3 hours or until meat is tender

Makes 8 to 10 servings

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER FORECAST

NORTHEAST: Rain and cold then sunny and mild showers north snow west

SOUTHEAST: Cold wave and rain then clearing and warming some scattered showers

MIDWEST: Cold and mostly clear rain and freezing rain east warming then colder with showers snow north

NORTHWEST: Showers and seasonable clearing then colder rain snow mountains

OPINION

The Process Of Developing Consensus

A hint of believable grassroots farmer opinion has been reported out of the Penn State University College of Agriculture. (See Page A1 this issue.) The survey's results offer verifiable and testable means of supporting statements presented as fact.

This is often not the case.

With the increased number of conflicting opinions amoung farm groups that have appeared on the scene in the past decade, it gets very difficult to get to the bottom line about who is actually being represented by whom, and what positions are, in fact, widely supported.

The increased use of fascimile communications, computer links, desk-top publishing and low-cost publicity services have made it more and more difficult to discern between legitimate claims of farmer representation and ballyhoo.

That presents a challenge to us all to work a little harder at being able to sift through the dogma to discover fact, and to not always believe what we read, or what a friend says is fact.

This challenge of course is always present, but current and planned communications technology makes it much easier for fewer and fewer individuals to influence the knowledge of the public, to twist facts and to alter public policy for their own benefit.

It used to be that a good rule of thumb that only organizations with a substantial membership could afford the postage and fancy letterhead and professionally written news releases. No more.

Now, with a little startup money and some relatively inexpensive technology, fewer than a handful of people can successfully operate "non-profit, grass-roots organizations" that purport to represent the opinions and policy desires of an unsubstantiated "large majority."

While this may not seem significant, consider the effect the numerous anti-agriculture organizations have had in misinforming and misleading the public; consider the hardships endured by the apple industry over some unsubstantiated claims made by only a few people; consider the Dr. Spock snafu and the effects it has had, etc..

And there are many, many more incidents of individuals and small groups that say they speak for and are supported by hundreds of thousands or even millions of other people.

The PSU survey sampling represents roughly 10-percent of the dairy farm owners in the state, which is far from a total consensus. Even so, while the facts resulting from the survey may or may not be indicative of the desires of the majority of the state's dairy producers, it is refreshingly substantive, straightfoward, and it offers an alternative process to develope consensus.

NOW IS THE TIME

By John Schwartz
Lancaster County Agricultural Agent

To Test Forages

According to Glenn Shirk, extension dairy agent, high producing cows, dry cows, and heifers require rations that are properly balanced.

He said, "There is little room for error." Failure to provide the proper ration may result in calving difficulties, metabolic diseases, depressed appetites, reduced production, lower conception rates, and more problems with infections, lameness, etc.

Good feeding starts with good quality feed. Forages are a major part of the ration. However, the quality of forages may vary considerably.

The best indicator of forage quality is a forage test. To increase the accuracy of forage test results, be sure to submit a representative sample of the forages to be tested. Remember the accuracy of the forage tests will be no more accurate than the sample submitted.

To Work With Your Nutritionist

Nutrition is still both an art and a science. Experienced nutritionists will use feed and forage tests as a guide in developing rations. They rely on the test results as an original guide for balancing rations and then make adjustments as their experience and herd or flock performances dictate.

To increase the accuracy of the feed program, be sure to provide your nutritionist with accurate feed intakes and body weights.

Farmers work with three feed programs. They are: 1. The one that appears on the computer printout or recommended by the nutritionist; 2. The one delivered to the animal; and 3. the one the animal actually eats.

The only one that counts is the one the animal consumes, and it may be very different than the other two. Thus, it is important to know what the animals actually consume.

To accomplish this, develop a method to weigh what is feed and deduct what is wasted or refused. The balance is what is consumed. Be sure to share this figure with your nutritionist or service person so feeding recommendations may be based on accurate intakes.

Also, moisture content of feeds, especially ensiled feeds, may change from time to time. Farmers should have on-farm moisture testers to monitor moisture levels and dry matter intakes more accurately.

Then, appropriate adjustments need to be made to the ration. It is also advisable to test the final feed mix and take feed samples at different locations in the feed trough or occasionally to check on the accuracy of feed mixing and feed particle separation during feeding.

To Be Kind To Calves

The cool wet days of fall are upon us and winter is on its way. Thus, it is time to focus on how to keep calves healthy and comfortable this winter.

First and most important is helping the calf develop its own natural immune system. Do this by making sure the calf consumes at least one gallon of good quality colostrum milk within the first 12 hours after birth (the sooner, the better).

Then place the calf in an individual pen that is dry, well bedded, draft-free, well ventilated, and located away from older cattle. If you are using calf hutches, place them on an elevated, well drained mound and orient the open end to the southeast.

To help calves maintain body fat and normal body temperatures, be sure to feed them adequate energy in the form of high quality, high energy milk replacers or feed them more milk or more grain.

Feather Prof's Footnote: "Recall it as often as you wish, a happy memory never wears out."

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

TRUTH OR CONSEQUENCES
November 7, 1993

Background Scripture:
Genesis 27
Devotional Reading:
Hebrews 12:14-17

The story of Jacob and Esau is the narration of an almost — perfect crime — or so it would seem. At his mother's suggestion and following her clever instructions to the letter. Jacob tricked his father, Isaac, into thinking he was his brother and stole the blessing that Isaac had intended for Esau.

Of course there were some uneasy moments and close calls. When Jacob enters his father's tent, Isaac, calls out: "Here I am; who are you my son?" Some people would have failed right there. Then Isaac says, "How is it that you have found it so quickly (the wild game), my son." Jacob was quick with a good reply. Was Isaac just a bit suspicious here? It would seem so, for he says: "Come near that I may feel you, my son, to know whether you are really my son Esau or not." If Jacob was the nervous kind, he must have really become unhinged when Isaac having felt Jacob's hands, said: "The voice is Jacob's voice, but the hands are those of Esau... Are you really my son Esau?" (27:18-21).

But if Jacob was scared, he carried off the deception without faltering, "I am." And so Isaac accepted that the son seeking his blessing was Esau. Jacob had pulled it off! Isaac never suspected. He did not even become aware of his second son's duplicity until later when Esau came storming into Isaac's presence, asking for a blessing.

IN THE CLEAR

In patriarchal times, a spoken blessing, like a spoken curse, was believed to have irrevocable power. Once spoken, it could not be recalled or taken back. The spoken word, particularly of a dying man, had cosmic as well as legal power. That is something quiet alien to us. In today's world, if Isaac had been deceived into blessing the wrong son, we would say, "Don't worry, this is not binding. Nothing gained by fraud has legal or actual standing. But in the time of Isaac, Jacob, and Esau, the blessing was more than mere words.

Since the blessing could not be rescinded, Jacob was in the clear. He stayed out of Esau's way, and when his brother vowed vengeance, Jacob let his mother persuade him to visit some relatives far from the reach of his furious brother. It would appear he had gotten away with it.

But did he? Inasmuch as Jacob and Esau were eventually reconciled many years later, it would appear that there were no lasting consequences of Jacob's cruel deception. If we look more closely, however, we can see that there were some serious consequences. We cannot know for sure, but the story seems to suggest that when Jacob finally returns to his native home, Rebekah, his mother was dead. So, this woman who loved Jacob best of all never got to see her son again. This was one of the consequences of their dead.

CONSEQUENCES

Another consequence was the hatred of his brother. Even though Esau eventually conquered that hatred, still it cost both him and Jacob a lot during all of those years in which they were estranged. Yes, it is wonderful that eventually they were reunited, but what of all the years in between that they lost? And it certainly cost Isaac something, if nothing more than his peace of mind — to think that his own son would practice such a deception upon him! To know that he had been duped into denying the blessing to his favorite and first-born son. Furthermore, it is unlikely that Jacob was ever able to collect on the blessing and the birthright he had taken from Esau. The Bible doesn't tell us this specifically, but it does not mention or even suggest that Jacob ever returned to claim his ill-gotten gains.

Did God forgive Isaac and Rebekah for the favoritism that permeated their home? Yes, I'm sure he did. Did Esau eventually forgive his scheming brother? Yes, we know that he did. And did he eventually redeem Jacob from this terrible sin? Of course. But, in between that despicable deception and the blessed reconciliation, there were many years of guilt, shame and remorse that would not go away.

Don't ever think that just because the consequences do not seem evident or especially painful that sin does not exact a heavy toll; it always has; it always will.

MILK. IT DOES A BODY GOOD.™
MIDDLE ATLANTIC MILK MARKETING ASSOCIATION, INC.

GOLDEN LEAF TOBACCO CO. INC.

ATTENTION TOBACCO FARMERS

Golden Leaf Tobacco Co. asks that you make 3 grades of your 609 tobacco: top, middle, bottom and out-grade. It is also most important that you do NOT strip your tobacco wet.

Golden Leaf Tobacco Co. together with you have worked hard many years to insure that each farmer receives a fair market. Improper stripping can destroy a good reputation that you and Golden Leaf Tobacco have established.

We look forward to a good market season for your tobacco and believe that by working together we can make sure that you will receive a good price.

If we can be of help to you, please call:

COUNT ON IT.

You can count on Pioneer® brand hybrids to consistently deliver proven performance year after year. No matter how different your soil types, moisture levels, disease pressures, tillage practices or individual management goals. We'll help you find the hybrids that best fit your needs. And we'll help you make the most out of the corn acres you plant. So ask your Pioneer sales representative today for the numbers that count.

Top-end yield potential. Exceptional early growth. This hybrid features outstanding stalks, superior staygreen and very good drought tolerance. Above average grain appearance and grain protein content.

Record setting yields and exceptional agronomics. This exciting hybrid combines traits corn growers want: impressive early growth, strong stalks and roots, exceptional stress tolerance, above average drydown and lengthy staygreen. Widely adapted to varying soil types, tillage methods and populations.

The performance leader in this maturity. 3525 is a widely adapted, stable, high-yielding hybrid. Tall plant type, excellent for grain and silage. Late flowering will limit northward movement. Good ear flex and ear attachment. Strong performer under stress.

Comparative Relative Maturity (CRM)

With no industry standard for maturity ratings, comparing maturities between companies is usually difficult. Use this rating to compare Pioneer hybrids with competitive hybrids of similar maturity and harvest moisture. These ratings are based on customer side-by-side and research comparison experience. Individual company ratings may still show a variation from the average comparative rating.

Compost Tour Set

CREAMERY (Montgomery Co.) — Montgomery County Cooperative Extension's Recycling Education Office has arranged with Don Beck, Telford Borough public works director to tour the borough compost site on Friday, November 12, at 10 a.m.

Beck will explain windrow composting, in which leaves are piled into long rows and turned to manage the composting process.

Telford area farmer Gene Sopel will join the tour to explain how he uses compost on his farm fields. Sopel has spread composted leaves from the borough every fall for the past three years.

The tour is open to farmers, landscapers, nursery and greenhouse owners, others in the green industry, municipalities, and anyone else interested in learning about medium-scale composting. Don Beck will explain how the compost materials are collected and how the composting process is managed.

Gene Sopel will describe how he spreads the finished compost on his fields and how his soils and crops have been affected by the compost. Beck, Sopel, and Sally Pick, extension's recycling education director, will also be available to answer questions.

Disposal of organic wastes is an increasing problem for many municipalities, farmers and people in the green industry such as landscapers, nurseries, and greenhouses. Composting on an intermediate or large scale turns organic wastes into a valuable soil amendment and conditioner. Compost can enhance soils or replace costly peat and topsoil.

To help the county manage its organic wastes, extension's recycling education office is working with organic waste generators and processors to facilitate composting and other organic waste recycling techniques. The recycling education office is linking organic waste generators, such as Telford Borough, who need to find a place to recycle or compost their wastes, with composters and organic waste recyclers such as the farmer taking Telford's composted leaves.

The compost tours showcase how such networks operate. Additional educational programs to facilitate these links and to teach about composting and compost uses are being planned.

Also, extension is developing two directories, one of composters and other organic waste recyclers and another directory of organic waster generators.

If you are interested in being listed in a directory or getting involved in medium-to-large-scale composting, organic waste recycling, or using compost, call the Recycling Education Office at (215) 454-1245.

NAAB Holds 47th Convention

COLUMBIA, Mo. — The National Association of Animal Breeders (NAAB) held its 47th annual convention recently at the Chula Vista Resort in Wisconsin Dells, Wis.

There were approximately 275 in attendance with 11 supply companies exhibiting their products. This year's convention was hosted by Tri-State Breeders Cooperative, Baraboo, Wis.

The Convention Committee consisted of Deborah Wilson, chairperson, Roger Ripley, Bruce Odeen, Julie Larson, Char McCauley, Dianne Deaton and Jim Cabaj.

Wednesday evening, convention guests gathered outside in the garden for a "Taste of Wisconsin" at the host reception. The NAAB Awards Banquet was held Thursday evening where delegates and guests enjoyed the presentation of four industry awards. The next day, convention attendees expressed their appreciation to Tri-State Breeders, by unanimously passing a special resolution recognizing their efforts of the past few months in preparation of this event.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS ELECTION

In other business, one new director was elected to serve on the NAAB Board, that was Kenneth Leick, board director for 21st Century Genetics, Shawano, Wis.

Two incumbents re-elected to the NAAB Board were Dick Chichester, general manager, Select Sires, Plain City, Ohio and Jon Mast, director for Noba, Inc., Tiffin, Ohio. Jack Shelton, president of American Breeders Service, DeForest, Wisconsin, was elected to fill the unexpired term of Dr. John Sullivan.

Following the business session, the NAAB Board reorganized electing DuWayne Kutz, general manager, Sire Power, Tunkhannock, to serve as chairman.

Dan Ranney, owner of Excelsior Farms, Corona, Calif., was elected vice chairman, and Jon Mast is to serve as the third member of the executive committee.

Other members of the board include Bruce Bean, general manager, Eastern AI Cooperative, Ithaca, N.Y.; Peter Blodgett, general manager, Landmark Genetics, Hughson, Calif.; Ken Persyn, owner, Medina Valley Genetics, Castroville, Texas.

Dr. Gordon A. Doak, was appointed secretary/treasurer and president of NAAB.

Retiring from the NAAB Board was R. Douglas Wilson, CEO for 21st Century Genetics, Shawano, Wis. He was recognized with plaques for his six-year tenure on the board, the last two of which he served as chairman.

The Thursday morning opening general session was highlighted with the annual chairman's address by Doug Wilson.

He spoke of the many challenges NAAB would be faced with in the coming years and questioned as to where NAAB should be positioned in such areas of international marketing, member unity, trade association priorities and structure, research, beef programming and the many key issues to be worked out in the dairy industry. But he said, "I'm pleased you have a board and staff that are ready to tackle the next decade of change and assure your trade association is positioned properly."

There were eight new high achievers of the Cow and Unit Sales Awards recognized with a special plaque presentation.

Alan Bair, director of Member/Public Relations, Atlantic Breeders Cooperative, then previewed next year's annual convention. Attendees got a real taste of the "Sweetest place on Earth" as handfuls of mouth-watering Hershey chocolate kisses were passed out along with an invitation to come to Hershey. Dates for next year's convention are August 24-26, and the host is Atlantic Breeders Cooperative of Lancaster.

Thursday afternoon's educational session included Dr. Martin Sieber, NAAB director of International Market Development who spoke on the topic of "International Semen Market"; Dr. Rex Powell, research geneticist, USDA-Animal Improvement Programs Laboratory spoke about "International Comparison of Dairy Genetics"; Roy Wallace, vice president Beef Programs, Select Sires, spoke on "Export Market for US Beef Semen"; and the subject of "Genetic Improvement Programs in other Countries" were addressed by Dr. Dave Selner, vice president for sire procurement, 21st Century Genetics and Dr. Rex Powell, USDA-AIPL.

At Friday morning's business session, delegates passed a resolution strongly urging USDA-AIPL to develop methods for including Owner/Sampler production records in their Sire Genetic Evaluation Program as a cost effective method of maintaining and increasing the rate of genetic progress in the national dairy herd.

Dr. Donald R. Monke, vice president Sire Health Programs at Select Sires, and CSS chairman of the board, reported on the status of NAAB subsidiary, Certified Semen Services (CSS). He reviewed the status of such topics as the Semen Plasma Brucellosis Test, BVD Virus Test Protocol, CSS Combination of Antibiotics and Semen Import Regulations.

In his president's address, Dr. Gordon A. Doak presented an indepth overview of the activities being carried out by NAAB.

He said in 1992, unit sales increased for dairy domestic 3.8 percent, dairy international 10.1 percent, beef domestic 5.7 percent, beef international 48.1 percent, and beef custom frozen 21.9 percent. Only dairy custom frozen decreased, -12.7 percent. The value of international dairy sales increased three percent and beef value increased 48.5 percent. Total units exported in 1992 increased to 5.6 million with a value of $43.3 million.

Following a review of funding cuts in the USDA-FAS Foreign Market Development and Market Promotion Programs, it was announced that NAAB will participate in a national livestock genetics organization. US Livestock Genetics Export Inc. is to consolidate the foreign market development programs of a number of organizations associated with cattle, sheep and swine. Through this national organization, it is hoped additional funding for export development of US genetics can be generated.

Delegates were informed about NAAB's work with USDA-APHIS/Veterinary Services regarding regulations for inspecting semen imported into the US. In the research area, NAAB and a number of other organizations will be funding research at USDA-AIPL. This work is to update age and season-of-calving factors to standardize milk, fat and protein yield. A proposed uniform policy for advertising foreign dairy genetics in the US was also reviewed.

Blair County Dairy Farm Takes Three Of Four Top Pa.DHIA Awards

for Holstein milk production.

"I've been surprise about the whole herd (winning the management award), and I was surprised the (individual cow) records ranked so high. I figured they would make it within the top 20, but not top the state," Mark said.

Frederick Farms is a family partnership that operates on about 350 acres in the Morrison's Cove area. In addition to Mark, there is his brother Dave and their father Gerald. Dave and Gerald primarily take care of raising forages and grain. "My dad and my sister (Carol) do night milking most of the time," Mark said.

The herd management award they won is casually referred to as an award that recognizes the Pa.DHIA-member herd that has experienced the largest increase in average milk and milk component production.

The Frederick Farm herd average is 28,060 pounds of milk, with 1,091 pounds of butterfat and 886 pounds of protein. The herd increased production per cow by about 8,000 pounds of milk over the last two years.

Normally, surges in average production indicate a landmark change in management, or a significant change in the herd.

In some cases a surge in production can also be caused by returning to previous production levels: a partial herd dispersal followed by a strong production increase as heifers mature; or, in other cases it may signify recovery from drought, or disease induced setbacks.

In the Fredericks' case, milking three times per day — at 6 a.m., 2 p.m. and 10 p.m. — was the only major change in management in the past two years, but it correlates to production increases of about 4,000 pounds each year.

"We saw an immediate increase in the amount of milk we were getting," Mark said.

"We had come to a point where we either had to get more cows or get more milk out of the cows we had, in order to be profitable. We tried the three-times-a-day milking and didn't have to look any further."

Daryl Brumbaugh, a Pa.DHIA technician who works with the Fredericks said the change was very apparent.

"By milking three-times-a-day, the Fredericks had an immediate 20- to 25-percent increase in both volume and quality," he said.

If the increase in average herd milk production was the only criterion for the award, the Fredericks would probably win, but there is more considered in determining the management award winner.

All the Pa.DHIA awards are based on end-of-year data, which is as of Sept. 30 (see Oct. 30 issue Lancaster Farming).

In addition to considering production improvement, Pa.DHIA also considers sustained production, mastitis management, and reproductive management. Each catagory is broken down into subcatagories and points are assigned.

Out of a total possible estimated 230 points (one catagory determines points by formula), Frederick Farms earned 154, which puts them not only at the top of the Holstein breed, but of all breeds in the state on test.

The individual cow production awards are more straightforward.

Frederick Farms cow No.32 was top Holstein in the state for butterfat production. The homebred, Walkway Chief Mark daughter, made the record on a lactation started when she was 4-years, 2-months old.

Her dam was a Creek Bluff Elevation Lester daughter and made about 28,000 pounds as a 5-year-old, five years ago, when the Fredericks put their herd on test.

The highest protein producing Holstein was No. 68 in the Frederick herd. No. 68 is a registered daughter of Cold Springs Helios, a Jetstream son. She made a lactation record, started at 5-years-2 months age, of 37,576 pounds of milk, 1,281 pounds of protein, and 1,463 pounds of butterfat.

Mark said he had bought No. 68 and her dam, Trix, from Virgil Walters, 77, of Blairsville, who sold some of his milking string to Mark in 1988. Actually, Mark said he first bought the dam, and then later bought six heifers from Walters, and No. 68 was one of the heifers.

"I would like to thank him (Walters) for selling them to me. They really did well for me," Mark said.

The cows Frederick bought from Walters had not been on test, though Walters had previous herds on test, Mark said, so while he didn't know exactly what kind of documented production he could expect, he knew that Walters had a good reputation and the cows appeared as though they would perform well.

The second highest producing Holstein on Pa.DHIA test was Frederick Farms' No. 53, which Mark said is the smallest statured cow in the herd. A 5-year-old when she started her last lactation, she recorded a production of 40,581 pounds of milk with a 2.8 percent test on butterfat, and 2.8 percent on protein.

"I don't know how she does it," Mark said.

However, the basics are followed at Frederick Farms, Mark said. Treating all milking animals the same, rather than setting up "showcase" cow stalls, Frederick Farms uses a freestall barn and double-six herringbone milking parlor built in 1968.

It takes two people a little less than 2 hours from start to cleanup for each milking, he said.

Mark said he feeds a totally mixed ration (TMR), and he feeds six times per day, making no abrupt changes in the rations.

"We fed a TMR since about 1991," he said. "That really boosted (production) some, but I wouldn't say that is why" the dairy herd came on so strongly.

He said production gains took the herd to the 20,000 pound mark, but it stayed there until going to the 3X milking schedule.

"We had about three years with about 20,000 (pounds of milk average), then last year it went to 24,000 pounds and this year it's 28,000 pounds," he said.

He said the increase in production can't be a simple function of increasing maturity in the milking herd — "We're almost 50 percent 2-year-olds," he said. They raise from 100 to 120 replacement animals. All bull calves are sold.

Mark said he puts credit for the herd and individual cow performance on several things, but he said he mostly counts on the increased number of milkings.

He did say that consistancy in feeding high quality forages seems to make a big difference.

They make haylage, silage, high moisture corn, and also feed cottonseed and a 40-percent pellet, he said.

The quality of forage is high, Mark said, crediting the rest of the family with having as much responsibility for ensure the profitability of the help.

The Fredericks don't have a computer system from which to work.

He uses a breeding wheel to keep track of the cows coming into heat and to record artificial inseminations. He also talks over bull selection with his representative from an aritificial insemination company.

"I usually try to mate for udders, feet and legs, and for production. I like them (PTAs) to be a ton of milk, and prefer type to be at least a 1.80. I've probably watched for protein, this last year at least, maybe more than I did before," he said.

"It's a lot of luck. I do my artificial insemination studies, then we breed and hope for the best."

Currently on the farm are Gerald and Beverly; son Mark and his wife Carla, and their children Paul, Mark Jr., and Missy; son Dave and wife Kim, and their sons Aaron and Adam; and daughter Carol Frederick.

The family got involved with dairying when Gerald, who is a school teacher, decided to buy some milk cows.

"He didn't like to milk," Mark said, "so mom and I always did it. It got into my blood and that was the beginning."

Gerald, Mark, David, Carol, and Carla were all FFA members and earned their Keystone Farmer Degree. The next generation is following suit with Adam and Aaron in FFA, and Paul and Mark in 4-H. All four have dairy cattle projects.

Mark Frederick holds the halter of Eve, his nephew's show cow which is currently producing 150 pounds of milk per day.

The milk the Fredericks sell is marketed to Sani-Dairy, which retails over a fairly large rural and urban-pocketed region, and while the market seems to be holding, Mark said the family has no immediate plans for a large expansion.

"I think we'd like to get to a hundred cows," he said, "but nothing really big."

However, the current herd looks good, Mark said. In addition to the stock he purchased from Walters, "I also bought a few heifers off of Jay Houser, in Spring Mills. They've done real well for me. None of those made the (top Pa.DHIA) list, but several made 30,000 pounds of milk as cows."

The next milestone for the Fredericks is yet to come. They have scheduled their herd's first classification for December.

Dairy Board Sets Budget

BROOKFIELD, Wis. — Setting organizational priorities and a budget aimed at helping dairy farmers build more demand for their milk and coordinating the 15-cent promotion checkoff were the goals of a special planning meeting held by the National Dairy Promotion and Research Board Sept. 21 before its regularly scheduled meeting.

The 36 dairy farmers serving on the National Dairy Board approved four major priorities to guide programs during the coming year. The vote on priorities and strategies for achieving the goals attached to each priority guided the Board's decisions in allocating the $80.34 million budget.

Fully aware of the downtrend plaguing fluid consumption and farm milk prices, dairy farmers serving on the National Dairy Board set a goal to boost per capita fluid milk consumption back to last year's level, 15.3 gallons, by December 1995.

"Considering the steady decline in per capita consumption of fluid milk over the past few years as well as the tremendous growth in market share and the number of different categories of competing beverages including teas and bottled waters, we think holding fluid consumption steady is an ambitious goal," said Robert Giacomini, California dairyman and chair of the National Dairy Board.

The National Dairy Board will work closely with UDIA which leads the charge for promoting fluid milk. Strategies which will help achieve this goal and sell more fluid milk include: developing and marketing improved fluid packaging, products and positionings; maintaining the already favorable attitudes and usage of fluid milk by kids improving attitudes and increasing consumption of fluid milk by late teen and adult consumer segments; and working with others in the distribution chain beween cow and consumer.

The Board approved $30.266 million to cover costs of all programs supporting these strategies.

Cheese Priority

Cheese sales have the most impact on the M-W price and have been climbing steadily for the past decade. So the Board set a goal to increase per capita consumption of cheese to 28 pounds by December 1995, maintaining the current cheese consumption trend.

The Board topped its list of strategies for selling cheese with maintaining favorable attitudes in the face of growing health concerns and more stringent nutrition labeling laws. Other strategies include: building top of mind awareness and expanding usage of cheese through new ideas and newer varieties, both at home and away from home; improving customer satisfaction through increased quality and safety of cheeses, particularly low fat; coordinating better with all participants in the cheese distribution line, including cheese makers; expanding cheese use as an ingredient in food manufacturing; and expanding cheese opportunities in export markets.

The Board approved $22,089 million for programs to support these strategies for selling more cheese.

Milkfat Priority

The gap between the amount of milkfat produced and commercial use of milkfat continues to widen. To address this downward force on farm milk prices, the Board set a goal of using 200 million pounds of milkfat annually via newly identified or nontraditional uses and products by December 1996.

National Dairy Board members approved three strategies for achieving this objective which include: developing the role of milkfat in meeting newly identified opportunities, positionings and uses for consumers (i.e. cosmetics and confections); commercializing the benefits of milkfat for new uses; and identifying additional nontraditional areas of opportunity for increased sale/use of milkfat.

The Board approved $1.442 million for funding of milkfat activities which will be spent mostly in the area of product and process research.

Image Priority

Generally, market research shows consumers regard dairy products as natural, good and wholesome. Various news reports have been chipping away at consumer confidence in that image. Therefore, National Dairy Board members set a goal of showing improvement in consumers' overall predisposition to dairy foods, based on monthly random interviews, by December 1995.

The Board is to continue current and establish new programs aimed at refocusing consumers from avoiding certain foods to fulfilling individual needs; discovering and demonstrating the health benefits of milk and dairy foods; implementing an industry wide "dairy image" communications plan; maintaining a system for predicting and disarming potential issues that might hurt dairy sales; and assisting the industry in delivering safe, high quality products.

The Board approved $6.708 million of the budget for programs to carry out these strategies aimed at building the image of dairy products.

Other Priorities

Although not specific priorities, the National Dairy Board has agreed to continue with many activities including butter advertising and market research, foreign and domestic promotions of U.S. ice cream, promotions of U.S. yogurt in other countries, communicating with the industry about all its programs, and various research projects to develop and improve dairy product quality and safety.

U.S. Feed Grains Council Sponsors Mexican Sheep Feeding Demo

WASHINGTON, D.C. — A sorghum sheep feeding demonstration sponsored by the U.S. Feed Grains council (USFGC) may help solve the plight of the Monarch butterflies in Mexico and increase exports of U.S.-produced grain sorghum.

The Council has been conducting a sheep feeding demonstration, using U.S.-produced grain sorghum.

According to William Mark, USFGC director of international operations, "In one year, the program has put 150,000 head of lamb on feed as a direct result of the demonstration, and we project up to 450,000 head on feed over the next two years.

The Mexican government became aware of the success of the Council sheep feeding demonstration and determined that it could not only help local sheep producers, but could help save the winter habitat of the Monarchs.

Destruction of the winter habitat of the Monarchs was occurring as a result of overgrazing by local sheep producers.

"The overgrazing of the land was leading to a number of problems including soil erosion and a decline in the number trees. The Monarch butterflies winter in this region of Mexico, resting on the trees before their spring migration north," said Mark.

A subsidy program was recently started by the Mexican government, allowing peasants to participate in the Council feeding system. The results have been decreased grazing of the endangered land; increased carrying capacity of the land; increased profits for the peasants, who are now utilizing more profitable feeding systems; and environmental protection of the Monarchs winter habitat.

"It is not only an environmental success," Mark commented. "There is a direct link here between improving the production practices in Mexico and increasing the sales of U.S. produced feed grains."

The Council is a private, nonprofit organization that develops and expands export markets for U.S. feed grains and co-products through a network of 11 international offices.

The Council has staff in Latin America, Europe, the Middle East, Africa and Asia. Support for the Council comes from barley, corn and sorghum producers in 22 states. The Council also receives substantial support from leading agribusiness firms across the United States.

BSM MODEL 90 FARROWING CRATE

IN STOCK!

Constructed from heavy gauge materials, this crate is designed to reduce crushing with sow comfort in mind. The bowed bottom bars make for a comfortable 33" crate width when the sow lays down, yet the adjustable anti-crush bars eliminate the sow from carelessly dropping on the piglets. This movement restriction does not hamper the sow as lays down, or wants to stand up, as the bars slide up and out of her way.

DHIA Rate Increase

Beginning November 1st, PA DHIA will be passing on some fee increases directly to Chester County DHIA members. The services provided by PA DHIA lost money during the 1992-93 test year and had to withdraw money from their reserves to cover costs and to purchase on-farm computers. In order to put the Association back on a firm financial footing, the following increases were approved by the State Board on a per cow/per test basis:

Processing samples	1.0 cent
SCC	1.0 cent
Basic service	2.5 cents
Replenish reserve	2.0 cents
Research	1.0 cent
TOTAL	7.5 cents

This increase will show up on all herds tested on or after November 1, 1993.

Dairy Farming in Suburbia

One of the issues that concerns dairy farmers in Chester County is whether their operations can continue to co-exist with increased residential housing developments. Farmers are asking questions such as: Do my neighbors understand that cows make manure daily and that it has to be disposed of on the fields? Do they realize that farm machinery can only go 20 miles per hour on the road? Do suburbanites comprehend that a farmers' fields are the source of his income and not a public park for the community?

These are the type of issues that cause confrontations between farmers and their non-farm neighbors. Dairy farming can continue to prosper in developed areas, but both sides need to understand each other's concerns. Granted, it is more difficult if you are the last farm in the township, but even in this case there have been success stories.

The key to a successful farm/city relationship is for both sides to get to know each other. Farmers that take the attitude that they were here first and neighbors have to accept whatever they do are just as bad as the new homeowner who has moved to the country, but doesn't want to tolerate any normal farming activities. At one time, most people in this country had a relative that farmed. Today that is not true, and all too often they think food just appears out of nowhere on the supermarket shelves.

Farmers need to take every opportunity they have to educate suburbanites concerning today's farming practices. Activities such as school tours, open house tours, speaking at community meetings, and just good old one-on-one personal communications can go a long way toward developing a satisfactory relationship. Most people that move to the country are interested in how farmers farm today. Give them a chance to learn more about your operation. Yes, you have to get tough at times with trespassers and those who destroy crops, but these cases are not an everyday occurrence.

On the other hand, farmers need to use a little common sense or public relations at times. Don't spread manure next to a property that is having a picnic or wedding reception that day. Don't spray so close to the edge of the field that you kill your neighbor's rosebushes. People who move to the country have a lot to learn about agriculture. Who can do a better job teaching them than you, the dairy farmer?

Lancaster Extension Agents Receive Honors

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Three Lancaster County Cooperative Extension agents were recently honored for individual achievements at state and national levels.

H. Bruce Hellerick, horticulture agent, won national recognition in August at the 1993 LESCO-National Association of County Agricultural Agents turfgrass/horticulture awards luncheon held in Baltimore.

Chet Hughes, livestock agent, will receive a first place honor from the state in the 4-H Recognition and Search For Excellence programs sponsored by the Pennsylvania Association of County Agricultural Agents in State College on November 16.

Zoann Parker, 4-H agent, won the highest honor presented by the National Association of Extension 4-H Agents. She won the Distinguished Service Award at the association's annual convention in October in Winston-Salem, N.C.

Hellerick was honored for planning and coordinating the Professional Landscape Management Program, Focus On Tree Identification, held with the cooperation of Penn State and other agencies. The objective, according to Hellerick, was to increase the knowledge and professionalism of landscape managers in south central Pennsylvania.

"This program was implemented in response to local landscape managers' desire for more in-depth, focused programs," said Hellerick. "The problem with these programs, however, is the 'shotgun' approach of covering a little bit of everything and never covering any one topic thoroughly. Upon further discussions, I invited a group of landscape managers, nurserymen, and extension representatives to meet and share their ideas about creating an in-depth, four-year program specifically for landscape managers."

To date, there have been three programs: pruning, tree identification, and shrub identification, and Hellerick said the results have been "very positive. The program has been so successful and well-received that many individuals have already committed to attending all the courses scheduled for 1993, 1994, and 1995."

Hughes will be honored for implementing a program to teach 4-H'ers how to ensure a lean, healthy hog carcass. According to Hughes, at an annual county swine show and sale, after a routine evaluation at a slaughter plant, a 4-H market hog tested positive for sulfa residues and was condemned at a total loss. Regarding excess fat, as a result of the first 4-H swine carcass show in 1989, 27 percent of the carcasses fell below a 52 percent muscle score, and two carcasses had more than 1.7 inches of backfat. This prompted the need for a total education program for 4-H'ers to attack the problem of residues and excess fat.

Hughes also received a first place award in the 4-H and Youth Search for Excellence Program, which recognizes accomplishment in extension education through the selection of 24 agents who will share their professsional know-how with fellow agents during the professional improvement sessions at the annual meeting. In addition, he was also awarded a second place award in the state for a radio presentation on farm safety and from columns which appeared in Lancaster Farming.

Parker was cited for achievements in the 4-H youth program conducted in the county. She was among 1,200 professional youth workers from all 50 states and Puerto Rico attending the five-day, 47th association conference hosted by the North Carolina Association of Extension 4-H Agents.

State Grangers Adopt Policies

CLARION (Clarion Co.) — Over 500 Pennsylvania State Grange members set new policy on the North American Free Trade Agreement, dedicated funding for agriculture, organ donation and a host of other issues during the 121st convention here.

The convention ran Oct. 24-28 at Clarion University and was hosted by Clarion and Venango counties.

"As a grassroots organization, the policies determined here will influence our legislative efforts on Capitol Hill as we work on legislation that will affect agriculture and rural Pennsylvania," Brenda Shambaugh, legislative director, said. "These issues are of greatest concern to our membership and the Pennsylvania State Grange will see that these policies are addressed at the state and federal level."

The Pennsylvania State Grange is asking National Grange to continue support for NAFTA with Canada and Mexico. In addition, the Pennsylvania State Grange requests that National Grange continue its efforts to assure that environmental, human health and other concerns of United States citizens are addressed in an equitable manner.

"The Pennsylvania State Grange is especially concerned that the agricultural pesticide use and regulation, fruit and vegetable control and animal product quality regulations are comparable to current U.S. standards," Shambaugh said. "We feel if these concerns are met, then NAFTA will be beneficial to the agricultural industry."

The Grange seeks legislation that would enact a dedicated form of predictable funding for animal health research, indemnity programs, fruit and vegetable research, conservation and nutrient management implementation, the University of Pennsylvania Medical School, among others, and that this funding be combined with a tax fee on feed plus other general fund monies to address a funding deficit situation in Pennsylvania agriculture.

"It is important to have a stable budget and base for research projects that take more than one year," Shambaugh said. "This type of research not only has an impact on agriculture, but the consumer as well. It is imperative that we protect our number one industry as agriculture continues to deliver a wholesome product to the consumer."

The Grange is opposed to legislation that would put all labor under the same restrictive regulations as migrant labor and would create regulations that would require written contracts, Department of Environmental Resources inspection of housing, water testing, guaranteed wages even if no work was performed, unemployment compenstation and many more guidelines that would burden agriculture and small businesses.

"We are opposing legislation that would make it difficult for farmers to use migrant or seasonal labor to operate," Shambaugh said. "For example, there is one provision in proposed legislation that would require farmers to pay for labor whether or not farmers had a crop to harvest. No other industry requires workers to be compensated when no labor has been performed."

The Grange has a long-standing goal of advocating agriculture and conserving agricultural land and wishes to continue the protection of prime agricultural lands. The Grange also works for laws, programs, and procedures that would ensure that public lands are not routinely avoided at the expense of farm land when roads, railways, pipelines and power transmission lines, hazardous waste sites and low-level nuclear waste sites are located. The Grange passed a resolution that would empower the Agricultural Lands Condemnation Board to review and intervene when projects threaten valuable agricultural areas.

"The state of Pennsylvania needs to have an authority that will determine whether there are other valuable avenues other than prime agricultural lands," Shambaugh said. "This is another step toward protecting a valuable commodity."

Pennsylvania Grangers are urging National Grange to introduce and work for passage of the increased federal estate tax exemption. Currently, there are legislative efforts to reduce the current $600,000 exemption to $200,000, and tax currently non-taxable annuities and tax-exempt bonds.

"We feel an increased federal estate tax exemption is a more equitable means of taxing inheritances," Shambaugh said. "Large landowners, in particular, suffer severe economic impacts because of high inheritance taxes on their property."

The Pennsylvania State Grange is concerned that pending legislation would create a presumption that all Pennsylvania residents will donate organs unless they indicate otherwise and adamantly opposes the Legislature passing laws that would require compulsory organ donation. The Grange supports maintaining a voluntary gift from organ donors.

"Pennsylvania State Grange does not believe in the idea that organs would be automatically donated if not otherwise designated," Shambaugh said. "Organ donation should remain a private and personal decision."

The Pennsylvania State Grange is a rural/agricultural organization dedicated to improving the lives of rural Pennsylvanians. There are over 35,000 members across the Commonwealth and 325,000 members across the United States who belong to the National Grange.

ADC Gears Up For Meeting

SOUTHAMPTON (Bucks Co.) — Atlantic Dairy Cooperative is gearing up for its 1993 annual meeting, which will be held Nov. 18-19 at the Lancaster Host Resort and Conference Center in Lancaster, Pa.

"Cooperation in a Time of Change" is the theme of the 76th annual meeting. "Cooperation is our business," said Robert M. Dever, secretary and general manager. "During times of change, we call upon all members, directors and employees to work together for the continued success of the cooperative."

Atlantic's continued success as a marketing cooperative was noted in this year's financial performance. A record 3.5 billion pounds of member milk was marketed, at a net margin of $5.4 million. A complete financial report is to be presented by treasurer Evan L. Fineman during the meeting.

The meeting gets underway on Thursday, Nov. 18, at 9:45 a.m. with reports by Atlantic's officers and management staff. Videos featuring the operations of Holly Milk and QC Inc., Atlantic's division and subsidiary, will be shown.

General Manager Dever will present his report during the afternoon session, which begins at 1:20 p.m. Dever's presentation will be followed by one from Robert Giacomini, a California dairy farmer and chairman of the National Dairy Promotion and Research Board.

The annual banquet is set for Thursday night at 6:15 p.m. in the Lancaster Showroom. Don Schriver, CEO of Milk Marketing Inc., will serve as master of ceremonies. The scheduled guest speaker is Dr. Ronald Willoughby.

During the banquet, special recognition will be given to former general manager Dr. Paul E. Hand and executive secretary Terri Milinovich. Hand and Milinovich retired from Atlantic on July 31, with a combined 54 years of service.

The meeting will resume on Friday morning, Nov. 19, at 7 a.m. with the Young Cooperator Breakfast Program. At this time, the 1993 Agricultural Communicator Award will be presented and the 1993 Outstanding Young Cooperator will be honored. Guest speaker is Lanny Fratarre, a radio announcer for Pittsburgh Pirates baseball.

The delegate session follows at 9 a.m. with action on the 1993 resolutions. David Wilkins of Lincoln Del., chairman of the Resolutions Committee, will preside over the session, which concludes the business portion of the meeting.

A spouse program is planned in conjunction with the meeting. Participants on Thursday can chose between a shopping trip to the Reading Outlet or an afternoon at the Dutch Apple Dinner Theatre for "The Christmas Show." The program on Friday will include presentations by Mark LaRochelle of Putting People First on animal rights/animal welfare and Ann Walsh of Action Seminars on crime prevention.

For information on reservations and banquet tickets, please contact Jean Scullin, secretary to the member relations and public relations departments, at (215) 322-0200.

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Craig S. Oliver, state director for the University of Maryland Cooperative Extension Service, announced this week the apoointment of Nancy M. (Nan) Booth as interim associate director.

Earlier this month, Dr. Oliver assumed additional duties as interim dean for the College of Agriculture, University of Maryland at College Park. Oliver also is scheduled to become interim director of the Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station on Jan. 1.

As the interim associate director, Dr. Booth will serve as a member of the College of Agriculture administrative team at the University of Maryland, assisting the dean with Extension matters.

She also will provide leadership for the administration of organizational policies that pertain to county and regional faculty members, and she will assume a leadership role for Extension programs throughout Maryland in consultation with department chairpersons, county Extension directors and the Extension administrative council.

Finally, she will communicate information about Extension programs to federal, state and local government officials — as well as various organizational leaders — in consultation with the dean.

Booth began her professional Extension career in Maryland in 1973 as a home economics agent in Baltimore where she supervised a citywide Expanded Food and Nutrition Education Program and chaired a staff of 20 Extension professionals and assistants.

She moved to the University of Maryland at College Park in 1977 for a two-year stint as a graduate assistant in Agricultural and Extension Education, earning a Ph.D. degree in adult education in 1979.

Following a two-month assignment as an urban community educator in Baltimore, she became assistant director of the newly organized Energy Technical Assistance Program, serving as a liaison officer with two other University of Maryland units and the former Maryland Energy Office.

This was followed by an assignment in 1982 as an energy specialist for Extension's Community Resource Development and Energy programs in Maryland. Since 1988 she has been a regional Extension director, supervising Extension agents in southern Maryland and urban counties in the Baltimore-Annapolis-Washington, D.C., corridor, as well as Baltimore city.

A native of Elizabeth, N.J., Booth was graduated from the Benedictine Academy. She holds a baccalaureate degree in secondary education from Seton Hall University and an M.A. degree in family studies and resource economics from Michigan State University — in addition to her Ph.D. degree from the University of Maryland.

She was an elementary school teacher for four years (1967-71) at private schools in Elizabeth and Bayonne, N.J., and New Platz, N.Y., with responsibility for literature, mathematics and social studies programs in grades 5-8.

Her list of honors in recent years includes the 1993 Distinguished Service Award from the International Community Development Society and a 1986 national award for energy innovation from the U.S. Department of Energy for her Extension-sponsored "Small Town Energy Education Program (STEEP)." STEEP was begun in 1984 with a grant from the former Maryland Energy Office.

Booth helped to coordinate "Enhancing Community Vitality," an annual symposium during the 1980s for Maryland's public officials, agency workers and volunteer community leaders.

Harry Roth Receives Doran Cooperative Business Award

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Harry F. Roth, General Manager of Atlantic Breeders Cooperative, was the honored recipient of the Hal F. Doran Cooperative Business Education Award at the Pennsylvania Council of Cooperatives (PCC) Annual Meeting on November 2. The award recognizes people who demonstrate exceptional dedication and leadership to further the understanding of cooperatives in the American business enterprise system. Consisting of an engraved plaque and cash, the award was presented at the PCC recognition dinner at Penn State's Nittany Lion Inn.

Roth was chosen from a field of candidates nominated by their peers. Nominees have been involved in the Penn State Cooperative Business Education and Research Program and PCC. Selection was by the PCC/Penn State Joint Education Coordinating Committee. This recognition is made possible by the Hal F. Doran endowment fund, started in 1991 to honor Doran's many years of service to the Cooperative Business Education and Research Program.

The award recipient is an acknowledged leader and supporter of strong educational efforts for agriculture and rural Pennsylvania. He serves on the PCC Finance Committee and Program Development Committee for its director and officer training program. He is on the Boards of Directors for the Pennsylvania All-American Dairy Show and Penn State's College of Agriculture Advisory Council. He is also a member of the Governor's Partnership Board on Economic Development for Pennsylvania.

Harry Roth

Roth has been General Manager of Atlantic Breeders at Lancaster since January 1, 1985. He is also Chairman of the Administrative Council of Federated Genetics, a partnership of three AI cooperatives that carries out an extensive national and international marketing program. He is a Penn State graduate with a major in dairy science and began his career in the artificial breeding industry in 1957.

State Rep: Prescription Feeding May Help Keystone Ag, Chesapeake

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvania officials will participate in a research exchange project with officials from the Netherlands that ultimately will benefit Pennsylvania's No. 1 industry, agriculture.

Nutrient management prescription feeding and the potential for a 25 percent reduction of nitrogen in Pennsylvania's waterways and the Chesapeake Bay will be the focus of the exchange in November. The project is intended to establish a long-term relationship for coordinated research efforts with the Dutch, who lead the world in research related to animal feed formulation and nutrient management.

More specifically, members of the Chesapeake Bay Commission, its Pennsylvania delegation and members from other states, and Pennsylvania agriculture and academic officials, will travel to the Netherlands to meet with high level agriculture officials there. The group will visit farms, manure processing plants and other agricultural research institutions in order to get an understanding of how farmers there utilize nutrient management systems.

The ultimate objective of the visit is to secure the terms of an agreement for long-term research coordination with the Dutch.

The second phase of the project will involve officials from the Netherlands traveling to the United States to meet with key government, agriculture and research leaders to establish specific research protocols for long-term coordination.

According to Dr. James Ferguson, veterinarian and researcher with the Center for Animal Productivity at the University of Pennsylvania, agriculture officials in the Netherlands are conducting research complementary to the research being conducted here in the southcentral Pennsylvania region.

The center is one of the leading research institutions in the country dealing with the issue of prescription feeding.

Ferguson, who is leading the studies here, said he is working on prescription feeding research that could net a decrease of about 25 percent in nitrogen production and pollution yet maintain maximum feeding efficiency.

"This research will have environmental and economic benefits to farms and agriculture-related businesses," Ferguson said.

Dr. Charles Krueger, associate dean for research at Penn State University's College of Agriculture Science, also will be attending the exchange.

"This is the next step in our efforts to deal with the issue of manure management and cleanup of the bay," Krueger said.

He added that Pennsylvania is a regional leader in nutrient management.

In June, Pennsylvania Gov. Robert P. Casey signed nutrient management legislation that would require certain farms to develop and implement nutrient management plans which will help limit the amount of nutrients, particularly nitrogen, which could otherwise run off into nearby streams. Nitrogen has been identified as a pollution source in the Chesapeake Bay, Southcentral Pennsylvania's waterways empty into the bay.

"Farm operations with high animal densities seem to be at the heart of the issue," Krueger said. "They produce large amounts of animal waste which break down and create large amounts of nitrogen. Eventually it is carried through our water systems and to the bay. Because of the population size and farm animal density in the Netherlands, they have similar problems."

Those participating include Pennsylvania state Rep. Jeffrey Coy, D-Franklin, chairman of the Chesapeake Bay Commission; Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture Secretary Boyd Wolf; Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Resources Secretary Art Davis; Pennsylvania state Sen. Mike Bortner, D-York; Pennsylvania state Sen. Noah Wenger, R-Lancaster; Pennsylvania state Rep. Stephen Stetler, D-York; and Maryland delegate James McClellan. Other officials attending include Krueger; Ferguson; Dave Brubaker, PennAg Industries Association; and George Robinson, Kramer Feed.

Joyce Slaymaker Becomes County Farm Women President

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

STRASBURG (Lancaster Co.) — Today, the reins of leadership to one of the county's largest women's organizations will go to Joyce Slaymaker.

The Society of Farm Women of Lancaster County, with its 741 members in 29 societies, meets for its annual day-long convention at the Farm and Home Center today. This marks the 76th year for the organization that was first founded in 1914 by Mrs. Frank Black.

Joyce, who just completed a two-year term as first vice president, said, "The best part of Farm Women is that our motto, 'For Happiness,' is carried out by each society finding ways to help needy families and organizations."

Joyce seems to be the perfect candidate to promote the Farm Women's motto "For Happiness." A glow of happiness emanates from her as she discusses Farm Women, family, and life.

A relaxed, gracious hostess, Joyce finds pleasure in her everyday life as wife, poultry farmer, market standholder, and church and community affairs.

Although the Farm Women organization was founded for farm wives, change in society has resulted in fewer people being involved in active agriculture. This has resulted in many members no longer being farm wives.

"But even if they aren't farm wives, members must be committed to agriculture and its concerns to be part of Farm Women," Joyce said.

Legislative meetings are held annually to inform members about the concerns that affect farmers.

"Farm life is a base for so many things that happen. Although the family farm is almost getting extinct, we don't want people to forget the work that goes in getting food on the table," Joyce said.

Joyce is no stranger to the work it takes to put food on the table. She and her husband Clyde own a 75-acre farm along Rt. 222 near Hessdale. They raise 65,000 caged pullets. But the biggest part of her job is working three days a week at their Central Market Stand — Slaymaker's Poultry.

The Slaymakers buy already processed turkeys, ducks, geese, chickens, cornish hens, and rabbits to sell. Joyce makes bread filling to stuff chicken breasts and turkey cutlets.

Consumer wants have changed since the Slaymaker family began the stand more than three generations ago. Customers buy less whole fryers and turkeys.

"The housewife today wants fast dinners that she can get together in 20 minutes or less," Joyce said.

Deboned turkey and chicken breasts, turkey cutlets, and ground turkey are the most popular choices for fast dinners.

"We say we do everything for the customer but cook it," Joyce said of the many ready-to-cook cuts the market stand offers.

Joyce also makes ceramics and has her own kiln in which she fires items to sell at local gift shops. She enjoys flower gardening and cooking.

Since so much of her life revolves around poultry, it is not surprising that Joyce collects chickens.

Joyce grew up on a dairy and poultry farm in Manheim. After she married Clyde, the couple moved onto one of his dad's farms, where they still live. About 16 years ago, a friend invited Joyce to one of Farm Women Society 28's meetings.

She liked what Farm Women stands for and joined it right away. Society 28 now has 21 members who meet monthly in each other's homes or at the Farm and Home Center.

"It's a great organization, but it's a big concern that membership is dwindling overall," she said. Many of the original members are now in nursing homes and cannot attend.

Joyce believes that many nonmembers are unaware of the Farm Women and what they do. A visit to one of the societies, she believes, would entice a prospective member to join.

As first vice president of the county organization for the past two years, Joyce has had the opportunity to visit the 29 societies in the county. "You can tell many of them are from the farm because they know how to work," Joyce said of the many activities and fund raisers in which the societies participate.

As president, Joyce presides over county board meetings and gives a report at the annual state convention in addition to planning the county convention and Farm Women's Day. She is also expected to visit the 29 individual societies throughout the year.

Other interests include being organist for the Refton Brethren-In-Christ Church and being "Grandma Joyce" for the women's Sonshine 'N' Coffee group that meets weekly.

Because her husband, Clyde, was a former county Poultry Association director, Joyce helped with the poultry queen committee.

Joyce's love for flower gardening is evident by the many flower beds around her home in Strasburg.

The Slaymakers' three children, Doug, Duane, and Dena, are pursuing careers outside of agriculture. The couple have two grandchildren.

Joyce and her husband have traveled a great deal, mostly to visit Doug, who lived in Japan for several years and now lives in Seattle. In addition to Japan and the West Coast, the Slaymakers have visited Europe and Hawaii and have hosted several exchange students from Japan.

Joyce loves to entertain guests in the family's farmhouse. Here are some of her favorite recipes — using poultry, of course.

GROUND TURKEY MEATBALLS

1 pound ground turkey
½ cup onion, finely chopped
¼ cup celery, finely chopped
¼ cup fine dry bread crumbs
1 egg, beaten
1 tablespoon soy sauce
½ teaspoon freshly grated ginger root

Combine all ingredients. Shape into balls. Place in jelly roll pan. Bake at 400 degrees for 15 mintues or until done. Stir turkey meat balls into Sweet and Sour Sauce.

Sweet and Sour Sauce:

8 ounces crushed pineapple
¼ cup brown sugar
3 tablespoons cider vinegar
2 teaspoons cornstarch
2 teaspoons Dijon-style mustard

Combine ingredients. Cook and stir until thickened. Add meatballs.

SWEET AND SOUR CHICKEN

8-ounces Russian dressing
1 envelope onion soup mix
10 ounces apricot preserves
4 small chicken breasts

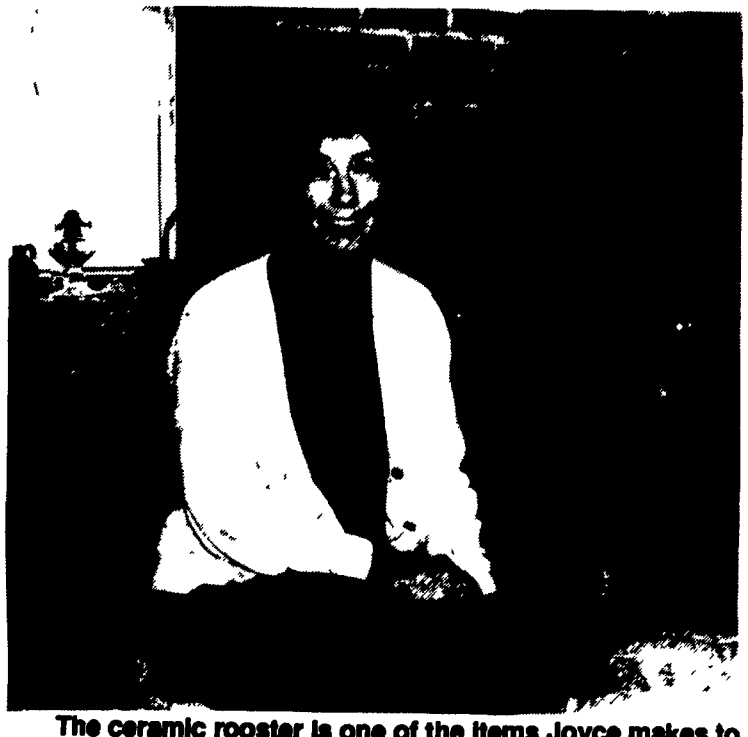
Split into halves or use deboned breasts. Combine dressing, soup mix, and preserves. Place chicken in well-butter shallow baking dish. Pour sauce over chicken. Bake at 350 degrees for 1¼ hours. Baste several times while cooking.

The Slaymaker poultry farm is located along Rt. 222 near Hessdale. Joyce checks the 65,000 pullets, tends the family's Central Market stand, makes ceramics to sell, and is active in church activities in addition to being president of the Society of Farm Women of Lancaster County.

TANGY BAKED TURKEY CUTLET

1 cup dairy sour cream
2 tablespoons lemon juice
2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce
1 teaspoon paprika
½ garlic clove, chopded fine
1¼ pound turkey cutlets
¼ cup dry bread crumbs
2 tablespoons melted butter

Mix together ingredients except turkey cutlet, crumbs, and butter in a large shallow glass dish. Cut each cutlet crosswise into 3 pieces. Salt and pepper to taste. Add turkey to sour cream mixture. Turn to coat. Cover and refrigerate at least 8 hours. Heat oven to 350 degrees. Remove turkey from marinade. Coat with bread crumbs. Place in 9x13-inch baking dish. Drizzle with butter. Bake 30 to 35 minutes until brown. Serves 4.



The ceramic rooster is one of the items Joyce makes to sell in local gift shops.

PSU Dairymen's Club Holds Banquet, Lion Classic

JUDY PATTON
Union Co. Correspondent

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — A reunion of Penn State Dairy Judging Team members was the focus of this year's Dairymen's Club banquet held October 29 at the Penn State Ag Arena.

The record-setting 106 people attending the banquet included 26 judging team members and four coaches from the 1948 team to the present. The coaches were Dr. Howard Thoele and Warren Poage, both retired from Penn State, Larry Swartz, president of the Dairymen's Club who is currently with Atlantic Breeders, and Dale Olver, who has been coaching the Penn State team since 1989.

Another highlight of the evening was the presentation of the fourth Dairymen's Service Award, which goes to a person nominated by virtue of contributions made to the Pennsylvania Dairy industry. This year's winner was Dean Amick, who is the director of field operations for Pennsylvania DHIA. Beginning as a milk tester in Lancaster County in 1954 with 11 herds and 400 cows, he now supervises 200 field personnel testing 4500 herds with 280,000 cows.

Amick's accomplishments include the development of a sample transport system with refrigerated trucks and system for recycling sample vials in addition to a one-of-a-kind liquid preservative dispenser for vial preparation. He also helped organize the North American Lab Managers Association of which he was president for three years.

Other awards Amick has received are: Outstanding DHIA Lab Manager in 1989, Outstanding Supervisor Performance Award in 1966, and DHIA Award of Merit as a milk tester for 12 consecutive years. His activities include Dairy Shrine, Pennsylvania All-American Show Committee, and the Pennsylvania Softball Association, of which he is currently a district commissioner. He and his wife Shirley live in Boalsburg.

To raise more money for the judging team endowment fund which supports trips and other expenses, the Dairymen's Club held its second auction of Penn State and dairy memorabilia and crafts. The auction netted $1340 for the fund. The club also raised $505 for the fund from selling crafts at the All-American Dairy Show this year.

In connection with the judging team reunion, Dale Olver informed banquet attendees that over the last 40 years, Penn State judging teams place fifth out of 70-80 teams in the country for overall winnings. This year's team won two breeds and was second overall at Eastern States, seventh out of 16 at the All-American, and fifth out of 30 teams at the World Dairy Expo in Madison.

Fall Classic

The 10th annual Nittany Lion Fall Classic Sale, held October 30 at the Penn State Ag Arena, grossed an average of $1963 for its co-managers, the Penn State Dairy Science Club and the Pennsylvania Holstein Association.

Joyce Ringler of Berlin in Somerset County bought the highest seller, first choice of a flush from a Leadman dam and sired by Benchmark, for $6300. Andrew Stoltzfus of Morgantown made the consignment.

NDB Installs Giacomini

BROOKFIELD, Wis. — The 36 dairy farmers serving on the National Dairy Promotion and Research Board began their Sept. 22 business meeting with a unanimous vote to install Robert Giacomini, California dairyman, as chair of the National Dairy Board.

Further, if there should be need for a successor, the board designated Sylvia Hemauer, National Dairy Board secretary and Wisconsin dairy farmer, to fill that position.

Giacomini served as acting chair after former National Dairy Board Chair James Loper, Jr. died while serving his second term in that position. Loper died July 19 from head injuries he sustained in a mishap on his New Mexico dairy farm.

In May, Giacomini started his fourth term as vice chair of the National Dairy Board. He has been a member of the board since 1989 and has served on the Finance and Administration, Public Relations and Export Enhancement committees.

He milks 450 cows in Point Reyes Station, Calif., and he farms 900 acres for pasture and winter forage.

Hemauer will continue her fourth term as secretary. Also a member of the National Dairy Board since 1989, she currently serves on the Finance and Administration, Advertising and Sales Promotion, and Export Enhancement committees.

With her family, Hemauer milks 80 cows in Plymouth, Wis. She is a member of the Wisconsin and American Holstein Associations, Sheboygan County Dairy Promotion Committee, a county 4-H leader and a founding member of the dairy industry's Butter Task Force.

New Salem, N.D. dairy farmer Robert Gaebe continues his first term as treasurer of the National Dairy Board and chair of the Board's Finance and Administration Committee. He is also a member of the Market and Economic Research Committee.

Gaebe, who milks 100 cows, also serves on the Executive Committee of Land O'Lakes and the Export Committee of National Milk Producers Federation.

The National Dairy Board, comprised of 36 dairy farmers from across the nation, develops and administers a coordinated program of promotion, research and communications to strengthen the dairy industry's position in the marketplace. This effort is financed by America's dairy farmers.

PDPP Board Adopts Plans, $1.5 Million Budget

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — At their October board meeting, the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program Commodity Marketing Board adopted new promotion plans and a $1.5 million budget for 1993-94. The plan offers Pennsylvania dairy a blueprint of activities for the coming year.

"This plan gives us a road map so we do not venture down rabbit trails," said Dick Shellenberger, PDPP executive committee member, from Manheim, Lancaster County. "We now have a clear plan that makes it easier for our board members to keep track of promotion spending and be more efficient and productive in our efforts."

The plans include a variety of programs from advertising to retail marketing to public relations. Most of the PDPP's funds will be spent on both television and radio advertising for fluid milk, cheese and ice cream. The fluid milk advertising will be part of a national campaign, coordinated by the National Dairy Board and American Dairy Association. Ice cream advertising will appear again in July and cheese promotions will occur in the fall and spring of the year.

"It is important for Pennsylvania Dairy to continue to use professional people like Jay Bell," said Janet Reynolds, PDPP board secretary, from Watsontown, Northumberland County. "We need to involve people with public exposure in our programs to reach more of the state's consumers."

Sports programming with the Pittsburgh Pirates and All-Star Jay Bell are included in the plans, along with advertising on the Penn State Sports Network. In addition, Pennsylvania Dairy will continue to develop retail and food service marketing programs for fluid milk and ice cream.

At the meeting, the Pennsylvania Dairy Board also announced the selection of a new advertising agency, D'Arcy, Masius, Benton, and Bowles. This group is to be responsible for coordinating a special holiday promotion campaign, targeted for November and December, to reach consumers in central and northeastern Pennsylvania.

"We must keep dairy farmers informed about what we do," said Reynolds. "Many dairy farmers are consumed with their own farm work and do not have time to find out what promotion is doing. Our efforts to speak directly to dairy farmers are very important."

Pennsylvania Dairy will continue to provide dairy farmers with a quarterly newsletter, the PA Promoter, to keep them informed about promotion programming.

Dairy farmers can also attend the PDPP's Annual Meeting, on Feb. 7, in State College, to get a complete review of the new plans and programs in dairy promotion.

The Pennsylvania Dairy Board also reaffirmed its support of the Joint Marketing Agreement between the Dairy Promotion Partners - American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, Mid-East UDIA/F.O. 36 Advertising Agency, and the PDPP. This agreement provides coordinated dairy marketing programs in western, central and northeastern Pennsylvania.

The meeting also included the election of new officers for the board. Karl Kroeck, from Knoxville, Tioga County, was unanimously reelected chairman. Donald Cook, from Drums, Luzerne County, will be the vice-chairman. Reynolds remains as secretary and Robert Gehman, from Coopersburg, Lehigh County, will be the board's treasurer. Shellenberger and Dr. John Plummer, from Chalfont, Bucks County, were both reelected to the board's executive committee.

Veterinarian To Speak On Equine Nutrition

CREAMERY (Montgomery Co.) — The NJ/PA Equine Schools, educational programs sponsored by Rutgers and Penn State Extension, have a long history of bringing internationally recognized experts to the region and making them available to local horse enthusiasts.

Dr. Harold Hintz, internationally famous equine nutritionist, will be conducting the second session of the 1993 Equine School. Hintz is chairperson of the Animal Science Department of Cornell University and teaches courses in horse production. He has conducted extensive research in equine nutrition and served as chairman of the National Research Council Subcommittee on Nutrient Requirements of the Horse.

Hintz will be providing information on developing a healthy feeding program for pleasure and performance horses. He also will be discussing the facts and fallacies of equine supplements.

The workshop will be held at two locations. On November 9, Hintz will be conducting a session at the North Hunterdon High School in Clinton, N.J. On November 10, the same workshop will be offered at the Holiday Inn in Bethlehem, Pa. Both sessions will begin at 7:30 p.m., but participants should plan on arriving at 7 p.m.

The cost of the workshop is $20 for adults and $10 for children under 18. Participants will receive a notebook containing extensive publications on equine nutrition and anatomy.

Information and registration forms are available from the Somerset County N.J. Extension Office, (908) 526-6293, and the Montgomery County Pa. Extension Office, (215) 489-4315.

Oberholtzer Wins Calf At Lancaster Holstein Banquet

VERNON ACHENBACH, JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — The Lancaster County Holstein Association held its annual banquet at the Family Style Restaurant in Lancaster Tuesday evening, recognizing outstanding production and electing new officers.

The purpose of the meeting, in addition to business is also to develop and maintain comradery.

The members of the organization also hold a distinguished junior member competition.

In the under 12 bracket, Denise Bollinger, of Manheim, was the club's distinguished junior member and received a full-sized, sturdy show box.

In the senior division, ages 17 and older, Dan Geissinger won a Pa. Holstein Association jacket and a trip to the state convention, scheduled for February in Gettysburg.

The intermediate-aged youth group competes for a show-quality calf. This year Heather Oberholtzer, daughter of Clair and Laverne Oberholtzer, of Elizabethtown, won the calf, donated by Lowell Brubaker, of Manheim.

The calf is Hilltop Heritage Star Gift, a Blackstar daughter out of a Good Plus 82 dam as a 2-year-old.

Heather said she has three other Holsteins — a 3-year-old, a senior calf and one that will be a summer yearling for the next show season. She said she intends to show her Gift calf at local Holstein shows and in 4-H competitions.

In other business, three members were elected to the board of directors. Elected were Daryl Mills and Robert Balmer. Re-elected was Lynn Royer.

During a post-banquet business meeting, the board reorganized with Jack Coleman as president, Lynn Royer as vice president, Leroy Welk secretary, and Dale Hershey as treasurer.

Speaking to the group, John Howard, a local member and also a director with the national Holstein Association, told the group that contrary to what some people may think, the national association "has been opening its mail."

Howard said some members have voiced concern over delays in getting registrations completed and returned. He explained that what the association does is open the registrations, annotate when they were received and then set them aside for completion as manpower is available.

According to Howard, the association was faced with hiring extra people to get the turnaround on the registration paperwork, or to allow a backlog to develop.

On the advice of a consultant, who reviewed the organizational flow last year, the association opted to allow a backlog to develop over the summer, while the administration was understaffed because of vacations.

Howard said that anything other than registration gets processed immediately, while registry waits for processors to become available.

He said that the backlog is about two weeks worth, but breeders shouldn't worry about paying more for registration. He said fees are based on the date the applications are received.

Also, Howard said that recipes are being sought to help put together a cookbook to raise money for the Holstein Women's Scholarship Fund.

Specifically, Howard said he is looking for Pennsylvania Dutch chocolate recipes from this area. The recipes are needed before Christmas. Those with recipies can send them to: Susan Howard, 1831 Hans Herr Drive, Willow Street, Pa., 17584.

Production winners for 1993 were Em-Tran Inc., of Elizabethtown in the junior 2-year-old division with a record of 30,449 pounds of milk, and a combined component production of 2,697 pounds, which was the highest component production of all cows entered.

In the senior 2-year-old division, a cow owned by Calvin Beiler made 29,421 pounds of milk, while a cow owned by Lenewood Farm made 1,796 pounds of components.

In the 3-year-old production division, a Walnut Run Farm animal led in milk production with 33,756 pounds, while an Em-Tran animal made 2,208 pounds of protein and fat.

Of the 4-year-old cows, one owned by Marvin Stoltzfus made 33,669 pounds of milk, while a Holstein owned by Robert and Linda Sensenig made 2,244 pounds of fat and protein.

Heather Oberholtzer smiles and checks out Hilltop-Heritage Star Gift, a show calf donated by Lowell and Deb Brubaker of Manheim that Oberholtzer won as a distinguished junior member of the Lancaster County Holstein Breeder Association.

In the aged cow division, a cow owned by Robert Kauffman Jr madce 33,536 pounds of milk and 2,287 pounds of protein and fat.

Lancaster County Holstein Breeders Association distinguished junior members are Denise Bollinger, who sits on a show box she won, and Dan Geissinger, who displays the jacket he won. Geissinger also won a trip to the state convention in Gettysbufg.

Council, USDA Sign Cleanup Pact

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — The Chesapeake Executive Council and the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) signed an historic agreement aimed at accelerating the Bay cleanup by ensuring a broader and more coordinated approach to controlling agricultural runoff.

The agreement increased the role of the USDA in the restoration of the Chesapeake Bay. The agreement was signed by Maryland Governor William Donald Schaefer, chairman of the Chesapeake Executive Council, and James Lyons, the USDA assistant secretary for natural resources and environment.

"This is a great day for agriculture in the Chesapeake Bay," said Governor Schaefer, "Partnerships and cooperation among federal, state, and local governments have been the key to our progress in restoring the Bay. This agreement will ensure that the USDA is involved at the outset in the decision-making process."

"Farmers in the Bay region have a strong commitment to the Chesapeake cleanup effort," said Assistant Secretary Lyons. "The USDA is poised to help them become even more effective partners in the restoration."

The Chesapeake Executive Council — comprised of the governors of Maryland, Virginia, and Pennsylvania; the mayor of the District of Columbia; the chairman of the Chesapeake Bay Commission; and the administrator of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency — directs the Bay cleanup program. In 1987, Executive Council members signed an agreement that pledged to reduce Bay nutrient pollution 40 percent by the year 2000.

Although nutrients enter the Chesapeake from many sources, studies have shown that agricultural activities, such as crop production and livestock operations, are a chief source of Bay pollution.

In 1992, armed with this knowledge, the Executive Council launched the Agricultural Nonpoint Source Initiative to address the challenges that farmers face in reducing agricultural runoff. The expanded USDA role is the direct result of recommendations made by the Nonpoint Source Initiative. Under the new agreement, the USDA will:

• Implement a new program, total resource management on agricultural lands. USDA will direct its agencies — including the Soil Conservation Service, Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, and Extension Service — to work with the Bay jurisdictions to develop and implement this planning process. It will provide an integrated approach to farm management featuring a wide range of best management practices to help farmers protect natural resources while maintaining production goals.

• Develop innovative methods and research to protect the Bay. Work with the Chesapeake Bay Program to spearhead research crucial to providing farmers with innovative methods to help protect the Chesapeake Bay.

• Coordinate federal agricultural efforts on behalf of the Bay by participating in various Bay Program committees.

• Cooperatively implement federal and state agricultural pollution prevention programs to help stop pollution before it starts.

• Secure appropriate funding and staffing resources to carry out its goals.

In commenting on the agreement, Maryland Secretary of Agriculture Robert L. Walker, who served as chair of the Nonpoint Source Agricultural Initiative, said, "I am pleased to see one of our major recommendations now underway. The expanded USDA role will go a long way toward helping agriculture meet its nutrient reduction goals."

Lititz Church Host To HPI Living Gift Fair

LITITZ (Lancaster Co.) — The Lititz Church of the Brethren will host the sixth annual Heifer Project International "Living Gift Fair" Nov. 27 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Sponsored by HPI and an ecumenical group of local volunteers, the fair enables people to deal with two problems at once — holiday shopping and global hunger.

"The unique thing about the Living Gift Fair," said volunteer fair coordinator Dan Fitzkee of Manheim, "is that you can buy gifts for loved ones and help a needy family at the same time."

Shoppers purchase animals or shares of animals in the name of a friend. The friend receives an attractive HPI giftcard. A family in need receives the HPI animal that is purchased. Colorfully decorated tables provide information about how the HPI animals benefit poor families in the US and around the world.

Shoppers at the fair will be able to choose from a variety of HPI animals, ranging from the more traditional — cows, goats, pigs, sheep, and rabbits — to the more exotic — yaks, water buffalo, and honeybees. New this year are leucaena tree seedlings, which counter deforestation, provide fodder for animals, and prevent soil erosion.

In addition to animals and trees, shoppers will also be able to choose from homemade baked goods, arts and crafts items, and more. Homemade soups and sandwiches will be on sale for lunch, and a petting zoo, clowns, and free balloons are sure to please children.

Heifer Project International is a non-profit development agency that alleviates world hunger and poverty by giving poor families "living gifts" of animals and the training required to care for the animals. Headquartered in Little Rock, Ark., HPI celebrates its 50th anniversary next year. Since 1944 HPI has empowered families in 110 countries to become self-reliant. At present, the organization has projects in 37 countries, including the US.

A unique feature of HPI's program is the requirement that recipients of animals "pass on the gift" by sharing the first female offspring of their gift animal with another needy family.

Last year's Living Gift Fair raised over $12,500; enough to send either thousands of chicks, 625 rabbits, 100 goats, or 25 dairy heifers to people in need.

Donations of arts and crafts and baked goods will be accepted up to the day of the fair. For more information, contact Dan Fitzkee at (717) 665-5743.

The Lititz Church of the Brethren is located at 300 W. Orange St., in Lititz, directly across from Warwick High School.

Interim Dean Appoints Assistant

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Craig S. Oliver, interim dean for the College of Agriculture at the University of Maryland at College Park, announced this week the appointment of Mildred F. (Midge) Smith as acting assistant to the dean.

Earlier this month, Dr. Oliver has assumed the position of interim dean in addition to his duties as state director for the University of Maryland's Cooperative Extension Service. Oliver also is scheduled to become interim director of the Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station on Jan. 1.

A professor in the College of Agriculture, Dr. Smith will retain her position as coordinator of program planning, evaluation and staff development for the Cooperative Extension Service. But her first priority will be to assist in the overall functioning of the dean's office.

Smith began her professional career at the University of Maryland in 1985 as an associate professor in the former Department of Agricultural and Extension Education and coordinator for evaluation and staff development for the Cooperative Extension Service.

She currently serves on the board of directors for the American Evaluation Association, and she has been an active member of the American Association for Adult and Continuing Education, formerly serving as national chairperson for the association's Cooperative Extension Unit.

Smith has authored numerous studies aimed at helping administrators evaluate Extension educational programs. Recent studies have dealt with establishing an economic and geographic basis for assignment of Extension agents throughout the state.

A native of Florida, Smith holds a B.S. degree from Mississippi State University, an M. Ed. from the University of Florida and a Ph.D. from the College of Education at the University of Maryland at College Park.

She has authored or co-authored more than 130 professional and Extension publications. Her book, Evaluability Assessment: A Practical Approach, was published in 1989.

Smith received the Award of Honor from the Maryland Extension Specialists Association in 1990. In 1990 she was part of a two-person contingent receiving the team award for Sustained Excellence in Extension Education from the American Evaluation Assocation.

Before joining the University of Maryland faculty, Smith served six years as a program evaluation specialist for the Cooperative Extension Service in Florida. She also did considerable consulting work for universities and state and local government agencies.

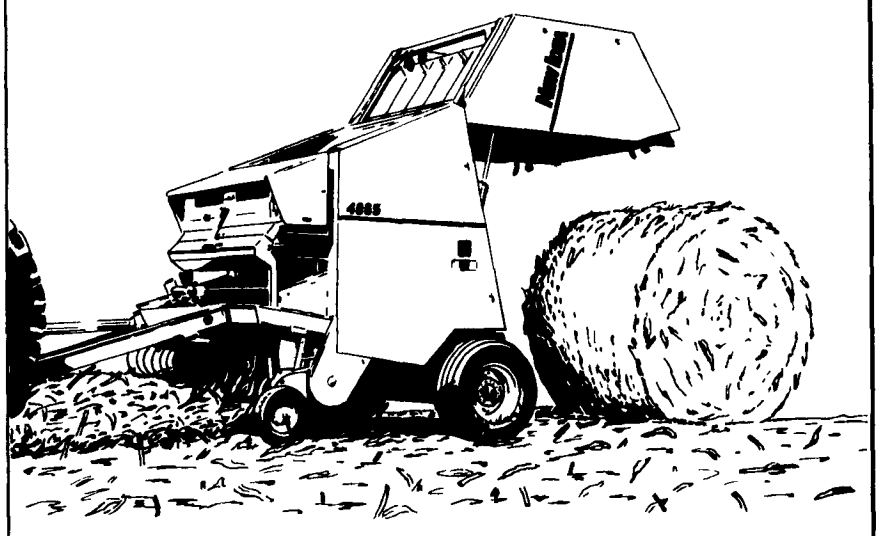
Exceptional Baling Of Corn Stover



Open throat reduces plugging making New Idea balers your wise choice for baling stover.

- Open throat design picks up and feeds lots of stover into bale. It starts bales easier because it feeds easier.
- Wide, endless belts cover more than 91% of the bale surface. This means the spaces between belts are very narrow which tends to put more stover in the bale.
- Fixed chamber design creates a bale with a dense shell that keeps its shape longer.

Are Culling Practices Killing Your Profits?

How are culling decisions being made in your herd? Are they made by you or by the problems that plaque cows in your herd? Are you able to upgrade your herd by selectively culling the poorer cows, or are too many of your better cows departing the herd prematurely because of problems. What prices do you get for cows that leave the herd; are they as high as what they could be?

Are your annual replacement costs per cow high due to rapid turnover of cows? On the other hand though, are you turning cows over fast enough to make room for the next crop of genetically superior heifers?

These factors can have a tremendous impact on herd profits, and answers to many of the above questions can be found in your Penna. and Raleigh DHIA Herd Summary reports. As an example, let's look at averages for Lancaster County herds whose records were processed at Raleigh. They are shown in Table 1.

The average culling rate for Lancaster herds was 35%. The average cow spent 2.9 years in the milking herd (100 divided by 35).

What affect does this have on annual replacement costs per cow? To calculate this, we need to know the net cost of bringing a replacement into the herd, which is the average cost of a replacement minus the average sale value of cows removed from the milking herd. Let's assume the average cost of a replacement is $1100 (cash plus non cash cost); and the average sale value of cows removed was $500 (breeding stock, culls and dead cows). The net cost of the replacement is $600 (1100-500). The average cost per year is $600 divided by 2.9 years or $207. If average longevity was 4 years (25% cull rate) the annual cost per cow would drop to $150 (600 divided by 4); that's a savings of $57 per cow per year.

About 29% of the cows that left the herd were 1st calf heifers (6 out of 21). Also, 29% of the 1st calf heifers were removed (6 out of the 21 that entered the herd). The culling rate for 2nd lactation cows was lower, as one would expect. It was 27% (4 out of 15). The highest culling rate was in the 3rd lactation and older group. It was 46% (11 out of 24).

What should the culling or removal rate be? The above figures would suggest it should be somewhere around 25-30%. Below 25% you don't save much on replacement costs and you are not introducing enough new genetics to the herd. These guidelines will vary depending on sale value of cattle and on why cows leave the herd.

Of the reasons listed as to why cows left the herd, only two of them are voluntary decisions made by the owner; they are cows sold for dairy purposes and cows sold for low milk production. Cows sold for dairy purposes boost cattle sales. Genetically inferior cows culled for low production help to upgrade the herd. Both tend to enhance farm profits.

All of the remaining reasons for cows leaving the herd can be termed involuntary decisions; the farmer didn't have a choice in the decisions. The decisions were made for him by the nature of the problems in the herd.

These involuntary decisions can be very costly because of: 1.) the prior costs of treatments, 2.) repeat breedings 3.) lost milk production, 4.) reduction in market value of cattle sold, and 5.) because of the premature loss of good genetic stock.

It would be nice to be able to sell at least half of these cows voluntarily for dairy purposes or for low milk production. If we look at Table 1, we can see that only 4 of the 21 cows that left the herd were sold voluntarily. That's only 19%! The bulk of the culling decisions (81%) were made by the problems cows have, not by the farmer!

This is a disturbing trend that faces many dairymen, and one that challenges all segments of the industry. We need to work harder to keep good cows in the herd longer.

Penn State is an affirmative action, equal opportunity university.

PFA/FB Has Full Agenda

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — The 43rd annual meeting of the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association (PFA) will take place Nov. 15-17 at the Hershey Lodge and Convention Center, Hershey.

Several hundred farm leaders, including 169 voting delegates, will gather to elect officers and set policies for the statewide farm organization. PFA is a voluntary, general farm organization which provides information, services and a voice in public affairs to 23,542 farm and rural families.

Voting delegates will be tackling grass-roots policy resolutions which originated in PFA's 54 county associations on a wide range of farm issues. Delegates will also be considering by-laws amendments including a recommendation to change the name of the organization to the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau. PFA is part of the nationwide American Farm Bureau Federation (AFBF). Almost all of AFBF's state organizations use the "Farm Bureau" name.

Voting delegates will elect a PFA vice president and directors for eight of the 16 districts represented by the PFA State Board of Directors. Corresponding vacancies on the PFA State Women's Committee will be filled by appointment at the annual meeting.

In addition to business, the PFA annual meeting agenda will include information conferences, guest speakers and special events.

PFA will present awards during the annual meeting for Distinguished Service to Agriculture and the Outstanding Young Farmer competition. The top county in farmers' association program achievement will be honored with the All Star award. Information conferences will take place throughout the three-day event, covering topics ranging from farm financial planning and farm safety to crime prevention and Ag in the Classroom.

The PFA annual meeting will conclude Wednesday, Nov. 17, with the election of officers and final adoption of policies for the organization.

Year's Last Southeast Pasture Walk Set

CREAMERY (Montgomery Co.) — The last southeast Pennsylvania pasture walk for the 1993 grazing season will be at Brian and Brenda Moyer's farm in Montgomery County on November 18 at 9:30 a.m.

This walk will feature late fall and early winter grazing. A no-till seeding of turnips into tall fescue will be grazed on the farm.

The late July seeding looks excellent. Brian and Brenda Moyer are experienced graziers working with 36 cows. The 25 Holsteins and nine Jerseys have a combined herd average of 17,000 pound of milk.

During the grazing season, the herd receives little stored feed.

Following the walk, a slide show will be presented on successful grazing throughout Pennsylvania. The Moyer's farm is located close to the village of Elroy on Allentown Rd. between Rt. 113 and Rt. 63.

For more information about the walk and directions to the Moyer's farm, contact Tim Fritz in Montgomery County at (215) 489-4315.

PFA/FB To Present Young Farmer, Rancher Awards

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — The Pennsylvania Farmers' Association/Farm Bureau (PFB) will present its Young Farmer & Rancher Achievement award to one of four finalist farm couples during its 43rd Annual Meeting, Nov. 15-17, in Hershey.

Several hundred farm leaders, including 165 Voting Delegates, will gather at the Hershey Lodge & Convention Center to elect officers and adopt policies for the statewide farm organization. PFB represents 23,546 families in 54 county farmers' associations. It is affiliated with the world's largest farm organization, the 4 million member American Farm Bureau Federation.

PFB presents its annual Young Farmer & Rancher award to a farmer or farm couple under age 30 who have demonstrated exceptional business skills, personal growth and leadership abilities. This year's winner will receive an expense-paid trip to American Farm Bureau's Annual Meeting in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., in January, a $500 cash merit award from the Dodge Division of Chrysler Motors and a $100 Savings Bond.

Competing for the state award are:

Brian C. and Fay Dietrich of New Tripoli, Lehigh County, members of a family partnership which operates a 1,000-acre dairy farm with 425 cows. The farm produces more than 4 million pounds of milk annually and features a state-of-the-art cow facility and a computerized milking system.

Donald L. and Joanne Stoltzfus of Morgantown, Berks County, members of a family partnership which operates an 800-acre dairy farm. In addition to the dairy operation, the family operates a manure hauling business.

Daniel R. and Sherri Mains of Newville, Cumberland County operate a 300 cow dairy operation with Daniel's father. They farm 635 acres, are distributors for Pioneer Seed Company and operate a mulch/tan bark business.

Phillip Gene and Debra Ott of Winber, Somerset County operate a 72-cow Holstein herd with a rolling herd average of over 19,000 pounds of milk annually. Phillip Gene operates in partnership with his brother Alvin, who works off the farm.

18 Pa. Ag Groups Join Forces To Support NAFTA

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — Convinced that the North American Free Trade Agreement is a clear-cut winner for Pennsylvania agriculture, 18 agricultural groups have joined forces in a statewide coalition to rally support for the agreement.

The coalition, known as Pennsylvania Ag For NAFTA, was organized at a recent meeting near Harrisburg.

The coalition believes NAFTA means more markets for agriculture and jobs for Pennsylvanians. "Passage of NAFTA is a win-win situation for Pennsylvanai agriculture and Pennsylvania's economy," the coalition stated.

The coalition points to the fact that Mexico is the fastest-growing market for the United States and the third largest customer of U.S. farm products. Trade with Mexico already accounts for nearly 23,000 jobs in Pennsylvania. NAFTA is expected to produce a net gain of another 3,000 jobs in the state. Pennsylvania's exports to Mexico have increased by 310 percent since 1987, rising from $181 million to $742 million. "That's three times the growth rate of Pennsylvania's exports to the rest of the world," according to coalition members.

For Pennsylvania agriculture the benefits have been even more dramatic. "Pennsylvanai agricultural exports sold to Mexico have increased more than eight times to $36,601,233 since 1987," the coalition said. "The sale of agricultural products and the growth of agribusinesses will multiply even faster when NAFTA opens markets."

Mexico's ability to produce food, fiber and plant materials has been unable to keep pace with its rapidly growing population. Mexico must satisfy this growing demand for agricultural products with imports.

Pennsylvania Ag For NAFTA believes the NAFTA treaty will provide great export opportunities. "NAFTA will tear down far more Mexican than U.S. trade barriers because right now we have the more open market," the coalition said. "Their agricultural trade barriers are four times higher than ours. NAFTA will give us preferential treatment over exporters in other countries. What benefit will there be in turning our backs on an export market that is already growing and prefers U.S.-made products? We believe NAFTA is a doorway to economic improvement for our state and we urge Congress to approve its passage."

The organizations belonging to Pennsylvania Ag For NAFTA are: Agway, Inc., Atlantic Dairy Cooperative, Dairylea Cooperative, Inc., Eastern Milk Producers Cooperative Association, Inc., Milk Marketing, Inc., PennAg Industries Association, Pennsylvania Apple Marketing Program, Pennsylvania Association of Milk Dealers, Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association, Inc., Pennsylvania Christmas Tree Growers' Association, Pennsylvania Farmers' Association/Farm Bureau, Pennsylvania Food Merchants Association, Pennsylvania Livestock Association, Pennsylvania Meat Packers Association, Pennsylvania Pork Producers Council, Pennsylvania Seedsmen's Association, Pennsylvania Sheep and Wool Producers Association, and the Pennsylvania State Grange.

Advisory Board

agriculture, or who have "sufficient knowledge, experience or familiarity with agronomic or nutrient management practices," according to the tenents of the Nutrient Management Act.

The board has indicated it intends to hold a public hearing before signing off on its final recommendations for the requirements and responsibilities of a state certified nutrient management technician/planner.

The meeting on Wednesday was called primarily to discuss a proposal for "Interim Criteria for Nutrient Management Plans."

According to the Nutrient Management Act, which created the advisory board, the State Conservation Commission is to create regulations for the administration of the act.

However, the law is written openly enough so that the commission members may develop the definitions and specific responsibilities continually.

But to get to a starting point, members must have some idea of what a nutrient management plan would comprise, and consequentially, what responsibilities and expertise would be required of a certified nutrient management planner.

The role of the advisory board is to review, prior to the commission members considering, any proposed regulations the commission may wish to discuss for development and approval.

The term "interim" was discussed several times Wednesday by board members.

It was agreed that the purpose of developing "Interim Criteria for Nutrient Management Plans" is not to create specifics by which nutrient management plans would have to comply, but instead, to identify more general areas of concern upon which a detailed plan would elaborate.

What the board considered were five major areas of concern: nutrient application, manure management, excess manure, erosion and sediment control, and laws, regulations and ordinances.

While commission staff had included some specifics in their suggestions for board review, board members quickly objected to the discussion of details.

It was argued and agreed that, in order for nutrient management planning to work, the guidelines must be flexible enough to apply to the various types of farming and non-farming applications of nutrients.

The other purpose of developing "interim criteria" is for use by those within the state Department of Agriculture who have been charged with developing a nutrient management technician certification program.

It was explained that, with an outline of the responsibilities expected of a certified planner, PDA officials can better prepare a program proposal that reflects the desires of agriculturists and environmentalists.

Although there was confusion over the term "interim," it was agreed that even when the board does recommend an "interim certification" program, it will not qualify anyone to create officially approved nutrient management plans.

Instead, the board members said that an "interim certification" would equate to a "pre-certification."

Specifically, it was said that those who would qualify for pre-certification would be further on their way toward attaining full and first qualification for certification, once the board, the PDA, and eventually the State Conservation Commission, approve standards for certification.

Board chairman Donald Bollinger, of Kleinfeltersville, said that the board is progressing well in its discussions of the issues and that much work remains.

In other business, William Brubaker, a board member who represents the commercial fertilizer industry, presented to the board his industry's program for certifying crop advisors.

According to Brubaker, the agronomic knowledge requirements included in testing to be a certified crop advisor includes everything that a nutrient management technician should have as a base.

Also, Brubaker said that a certain number of years of experience as an uncertified crop advisor were necessary depending on the years of college education in order to gain certification, but that testing was open to anyone, regardless of officially recognized educational achievement.

He provided each member with a copy of the crop advisor testing information and asked them to review it for consideration.

The next meeting is scheduled for Dec. 19 in the state Capitol building, in Room 8A, of the East Wing.

Survey

and "uncertain/no opinion."

Respondents disagreed nearly 2-to-1 with the statement "The government should use a voluntary milk supply control like a milk diversion program or dairy buyout." By a margin of more than 2-to-1, farmers disagreed with the statement "The government should use a mandatory milk supply control program such as a marketing quota." Among those who agreed with mandatory milk supply controls, less than half agreed strongly.

"Only 7.4 percent of respondents agreed strongly with voluntary supply control and only 8.9 percent strongly supported mandatory supply control," said Yonkers. "Among those who disagreed with supply controls, more than half disagreed strongly.

"This survey found much less support for supply control programs among Pennsylvania dairy farmers than some reports have asserted," Yonkers said.

Farmers were more divided about the statement "The government should subsidize export programs for U.S. dairy products." However, more agreed than disagreed that there is a need for subsidized exports, with 48.5 percent agreeing, 34.6 percent disagreeing and 16.8 percent uncertain.

Pig Pens Go High Tech

SCHAUMBURG, Ill. — Say goodbye to the old-fashioned pig pen. Increasing numbers of swine today are being raised in luxury pig penthouses.

Animal preference studies and advances in high technology have ushered in a new age of farming — creating an environment that meticulously provides for livestock needs, said Dr. Gregg BeVier, vice president of Premium Standard Farms, one of the country's largest hog producers.

Premium Standard, based in Princeton, Mo., is the quintessential example of high-tech farming. More than 8,000 monitors are wired throughout complex. Genetics, nutrition and environment are carefully controlled and adjusted to provide optimal conditions for the growing pigs.

"In many ways, big farms like ours improve the welfare of the animals," BeVier said. "We have the wherewithal to provide ideal conditions."

BeVier, a veterinarian with a master's degree in business administration, is one of nine farm animal welfare specialists from around the world who spoke at the American Veterinary Medical Association's fourth annual Animal Welfare Forum on November 5 at the Hyatt Regency O'Hare in Rosemont, Illinois.

In addition to state-of-the-art environment, Premium Standard Farms is also taking advantage of the latest management practices.

Rather than simply raising the hogs and selling them, BeVier's managers carefully control each stage of production; all livestock is conceived, raised, slaughtered and packaged by Premium Standard. Since the company can literally track one hog through the system, it has total control over quality, Dr. BeVier said.

This practice, commonly called integrated farming, is about five years old, though the idea has been bandied about for more than two decades. When Premium Standard Farms went into business four years ago, executives were committed to the concept. Today, they credit the process with the company's exponential growth.

Dr. BeVier admits, however that start-up costs are heavy, and only the biggest farms can afford to implement the idea. Still, he believes integrated farming is the wave of the future. Today, some 10 percent of the meat sold in the United States is raised on such farms, Dr. BeVier says. Over the next decade, he expects this figure will balloon to 30 percent.

"It's turning into a big corporate business," he said, adding that increased demand for integrated farming will be inevitable as consumers and export markets become more particular about how their meat is grown and slaughtered.

In turn, companies such as Premium Standard Farms must be constantly on the lookout for the best and most efficient ways to raise and handle animals. Many traditional practices — developed over the years on small, family-owned farms — have not been viable for large producers, Dr. BeVier said.

"The average farm in the United States has 50 sows. Here in the near future, we will have 80,000 sows," BeVier said. "Animal housing and welfare is a key issue becuase dealing with 50 sows and dealing with 80,000 sows is completely different."

Because Premium Standard Farms is so large, maintaining and improving the whole population is crucial. To do this, the pigs are housed in conditions vastly different from the stereotypical pig sty.

Instead of wallowing in mud, corporate swine are housed in spacious, well-ventilated barns. Their floors are flushed several times a day by an automatic cleaning system. Temperatures inside do not fluctuate — the buildings' environmental systems are on the same kind of controls that regulate office complexes and skyscrapers. Food, medication, and water is tightly monitored. By carefully controlling and measuring these kinds of variables, farm managers can continue to improve conditions for the pigs, BeVier said.

"I can tell you when our animals choose to drink water," BeVier said.

"Is that important? I might not know today, but as we change feeds, as the temperature changes, as we change facility types — any of this might alter the drinking pattern of the animals. We need to know that.

"The better we document what we do and how the animals respond, the more we're going to know."

BeVier acknowledges that big farms like Premium Standards have been criticized by some who think that animals are happier in more natural conditions like the traditional family farm.

He notes, however, that there is no way of knowing if animal is indeed "happy." Instead, Premium Standard relies on behavioral studies that test preferences in swine. The results of those tests are incorporated into the farm's day-to-day management practices, he said.

"Air temperature is an example," BeVier said. "Larger animals like it a little cooler.

"We actually have a growth curve — as the animals grow, the building gets cooler for them. It is all programmed in and computer operated. That's an advantage you get from high technology."

But not all improvements require vast computer systems and blinking monitors. Right now, for example, Dr. BeVier is thinking about building an indoor playground for the farm's oldest hogs.

While the fences, ramps and bridges might reduce boredom amongst the pigs, the real reason for installing them would be to reduce stress, Dr. BeVier said.

"We're trying to find unique ways to transport the animals," he said.

"You just can't say, Hey guys, get into a single file and go. We need to find ways to load and unload animals so they don't feel like they're being loaded and unloaded."

The playground's "toys" would be designed to look and feel like the farm's loading ramps. "If the pigs are used to walking up and down these things, loading the animals will be no problem," BeVier said.

"We try to alleviate animal stress," he said. "If we find things that work, we want to do it that way."

Americans May Import Ag

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — George E. Seidel Jr., a 1993 Penn State Alumni Fellow, recently presented several talks for students of agriculture and fellow animal scientists at the University Park Campus.

According to Seidel, a professor of reproductive biology at Colorado State University, it is likely that Americans will be using products of animal origin at the same level in the year 2025 as now.

He said that if societal constraints limit our capacity to produce animals, "we'll buy them from other countries, much as we buy our televisions and automobiles elsewhere today."

Seidel was elected a member of the National Academy of Sciences last year, the pinnacle of scientific achievement.

Final Notice For Promoter Of Year

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Nominations for outstanding dairy promoters must be completed by Nov. 30. The "Promoter of the Year" award sponsored by the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program recognizes an individual who gives unselfishly of his time to support dairy promotion and the dairy industry.

"Anyone can nominate an individual for this award," said Nadine Houck, Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Specialist. "The most important qualification is a person's dairy promotion activities. We are also looking at the nominee's community service activities."

Last year's winner, Cyndy Cass, from Wattsburg, Erie County, was an active member of the county dairy promotion committee. The first award winner, Insurance Agent Bernard Morrissey, is an active supporter of dairy promotion on both the local and state levels. In 1991, Eugene Schurman, an extension agent from Indiana County, was recognized for his service to local promotion efforts.

Pennsylvania Dairy originated the award to acknowledge the promotion efforts of volunteers and others who are involved in grassroots dairy promotion activities. The Pennsylvania Dairy Board values the activities of volunteer promoters and others who contribute time and resources to the promotion of dairy products and the dairy industry.

This year's winner will receive an engraved plaque and a $100 cash honorarium. The award will be presented at Pennsylvania Dairy's Annual Meeting, to be held on Feb. 7, at the Nittany Lion Inn, State College. Nomination forms are available by contacting Houck at (717) 787-6903.

How can you be sure you're getting the most milk/acre?

Select a company dedicated to forage testing

You can buy your forage products from a lot of companies But only a handful of those companies can back their products with hard core data gathered over years of research. We've been conducting forage quality tests on our products fof four years now That's four times as long as most other seed companies

And we've assembled that research from field-scale tests. Most companies base their findings only on small plot tests. Our broad testing programs give us — and you — a much better indication of product performance

Make sure your forage supplier can deliver quantity ... and quality

When it comes to testing a forage product, most companies start and stop at tons/acre. But Hoffman Seeds goes beyond that to test actual forage quality.

How? By getting individual forage analyses and using the results to assess production in terms of milk/acre So you not only get a measure of yield based on tons/acre, but also a measure of quality based on Relative Feed Value (R F.V.)

Insist on a broad product offering for Northeast conditions

If you're like most dairy farmers, your forage needs are diverse Grazing Hay Haylage. Silage. That's why we offer a complete line of products to meet alll your needs Best of all, our products — Funk's G® brand hybrids, alfalfas, forage grasses and pasture formulas — have been genetically selected to meet Northeastern growing conditions

We even offer inoculants to improve bunk life As well as innovative packaging programs like Dairy Pak™ to save you money

Boost your milk/acre

How can you boost your milk/acre? Just talk to your local Hoffman Seeds sales representative. Or call Hoffman Seeds toll free at 1-800-776-7929. You'll learn about our full line of forage producing products like those below.

Cows are a priority on the Wenger's Farm but that does not interfer with the opportunity to develop personal talents. Dean, 19, attends Penn State York Campus; Eric, 17, is Lancaster County Superior 4-H'er; Neil, 15; and Troy, 10, help parents Nelson and Alma on the farm.

Wenger Family: Where Cows And Kids Excel

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — Seventeen-year-old Eric Wenger is only a junior at Manheim Central High School but he has already accumulated an impressive portfolio of printing jobs that he has completed.

He has also developed a computer course that he teaches to county 4-H'ers, and he has printed a computer class manual that is being adopted by other 4-H computer clubs.

For his computer work, his excellent public speaking skills, and for his many other achievements in the 4-H program for the past nine years, Eric recently was lauded as winner of the 4-H Achievement Award, formerly called the Lancaster County Outstanding 4-H'er.

Only one of 13,100 county 4-H'ers receives this annual award. It was a dream of Eric's for many years to attain the award.

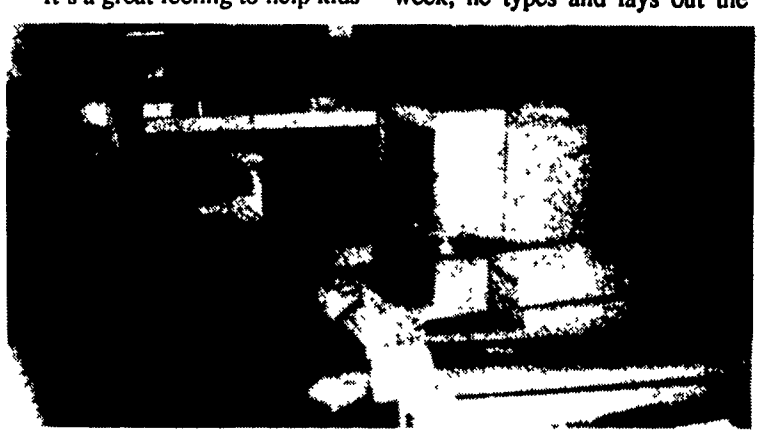
"It's a great feeling to help kids learn something and master it," Eric said of his four years of teaching computer.

His accomplishments are all the more impressive because Eric is self-taught on computers. He and his mother invested in an Apple computer and a laser printer for their desktop publishing business.

"Eric seems to get all the money-making projects and I get all the volunteer ones," said his mother Alma, who learned desktop publishing skills from Eric.

Self-motivation seems to be a common quality of Eric's. Typical of his response to mediocre printing jobs are the words, "I can do better than that."

With creativity, organization, and neatness, Eric has proven his ability by designing the catalogue for the Lancaster County Holstein Show, a church history book, many brochures for various events, and a newsletter for the Mastersonville 4-H Club. Every week, he types and lays out the bulletin for Erisman's Mennonite Church where he is youth group vice president.



Because Eric was not satisfied with the computer material available to teach a 4-H Club, he developed a manual that is now being used in other counties. He also does desk top publishing for many organizations including Lancaster County Holstein Association.

At school Eric is a member of the National Honor Society and on the yearbook staff, a former band and orchestra member, and a former member of Student Council. He likes business subjects and plans to pursue college studies in accounting,

The one thing that Eric does not excel in is sports, he said. And, something that he can do well but does not enjoy is working on the farm.

"Milking is not my thing," Eric said.

Nonetheless he obediently gets up two mornings a week to take his turn that is divided up among his three brothers, Dean, 19; Neil, 15; and Troy, 10.

The four boys help their dad, Nelson, with the family's 115-acre Manheim farm. They rent additional land to raise about 40 acres of alfalfa, 5 of mixed hay, 60 plus of corn, 13 of barley, and 8 acres of beans.

With four sons in the family, the tractor work is more appealing than barn work and even Alma likes to run a neighbor's six-row for some custom combining.

"You call that work?" asks Nelson, who said he usually gets stuck with the cows, which is the farm's prime emphasis. The 54 Holsteins and the replacements that they raise have herd averages of 20,600 pounds with 788 fat and 666 protein.

As an ambassador for the 4-H program, Eric visits schools and clubs across the county to encourage students to join local clubs.

Eric shows prospective 4-H'ers the thick scrapbook that records many memories Eric has of involvement in clubs such as rabbit, cooking, air rifle, Seeing Eye dog, and woodworking.

Eric shows his 10-year-old brother Troy the scrapbook he uses to tell prospective 4-H'ers about the opportunities the 4-H program provides.

"There are so many different clubs and each one offers lots of memories that every kid can have," he tells them.

It even makes school work easier, according to Eric. It was in 4-H, that Eric participated in speech contests.

"It's nerve-racking during the critiquing, but it makes school speeches so much easier because most of the kids haven't had much exposure to public speaking."

Eric is president of the 125-member Mastersonville 4-H Community Club. In addition to farm work and his desktop publishing business, Eric works part time as a cashier at Bomberger's Store, Elm.

Show each family member consideration and appreciation, especially in everyday ways.

Respect each person — his/her ideas, thoughts, and feelings.

Develop pride in your family.

Resolve problems and conflicts in a constructive way.

Hel;p each other and be willing to let others help you.

Grange Recognizes Deaf

CLARION — The Deaf Activities' Sign-A-Song contest had special meaning this year for Jennifer McCullon.

McCullon of Venango County said she dedicated her performance of "For All The World" to a friend who recently was killed in an automobile accident.

McCullon won first place in the Sign-A-Song competition on the opening night of the 121st Pennsylvania State Grange convention here. Also held was the Youth Department's Public Speaking contest with winners selected in three age groups.

The Sign-A-Song competition is held as part of the State Grange's Deaf Activities program and is a forum to demonstrate the ability to utilize sign language to songs.

"I dedicated this performance in remembrance of Mike because he was going to propose to his girlfriend and he truly wanted everything in the world," McCullon said. "I also like to sign and participate in this event because it gets you in touch with another culture and gives you a better understanding of what the deaf go through."

In the Public Speaking competition, Kirk Sattazahn of Berks County took first-place honors with a speech titled "Tomorrow's Yesterdays." Sattazahn discussed those who made discoveries that changed our lives - even when they were told they would never succeed.

"There was a man who drew cartoons and tried to sell them to everyone, but no one would buy them," Sattazahn told the audience of approximately 600 people. "That man was Walt Disney and I can't imagine the world without his work."

The Public Speaking contestants were judged on the content of the text, composition, voice qualities, stage presence, expressiveness, general effectiveness, time and their answer to an impromptu question.

On being a farm wife - And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

Our last livestock auction in York County has gone out of business.

So what?

The closing of this one agribusiness will not have any great, devastating, earth-shaking impact on the area's economics. As numbers go, it was a relatively small piece of the auction action that goes on weekly across heavily-agriculture-oriented Pennsylvania.

For those of us who used its facilities, its closing means finding new places to market, perhaps traveling a little farther, facing a little more inconvenience. But producers adapt. They have to — or they get out of the farming business.

No, the larger implication of the closing of this auction's livestock doors is that it is indicative of what is happening to a backbone industry of our beautiful York County.

In a county that long prided itself on its agriculture diversity, on its highly-productive soils, on its rural heritage, one more domino has toppled.

We continue to move from an agriculture community to a "bedroom" community. There continues to be fewer farms — and more front yards. Less corn and more geraniums. Fewer tractors on the roads — and more commuter cars.

We began farming here in our native York County nearly 30 years ago. Nearly every small rural town had a feed mill or store, a farm equipment dealer, a hardware store. As it became increasingly difficult to make a living from a small general farm, they either grew larger to remain economically viable — or went up for sale. Some farmland stayed in production; far more went under parking lots, malls, fast food establishments, houses. With diminishing numbers of farmers supporting small-town ag businesses, the equipment people, the feed mills, the little hardware stores — and the rural auctions — closed up shop.

Farmers today, like everyone else, have moved into a larger community and embraced the age of technology. We still swap local news and market information at the few remaining equipment dealers and feed mills . . . or compare cattle pedigrees across states by phone or video . . . or pull data reports off nationwide info-networks with PCs, modems and FAXs.

If a part or piece of equipment is needed, farmers are likely to phone-shop first before hopping into a pickup — or simply have the part sent overnight air or via a parcel handler. Feedstuffs may come from central mixing facilities 25 to 100 miles away. Few rural towns have a source where a farmer can buy a tractor tire or cattle eartags or fencing. Those suppliers for what we need have increasingly specialized — but in fewer locations that serve increasingly-distant customers.

And those remaining agriculture-oriented businesses have with merchandising savvy and of economic necessity expanded to include garden equipment, horticulture supplies, pet needs, country craft items.

I do not want to go back to the "good old days," thank you. (I'd have to give up my computer!) But, it's what the "good old days" represent that I think we miss: neighborliness, the country lifestyle, the slower pace of an earlier, more rural, more helpful to one another, way of life.

Our last livestock auction in York County has gone out of business. And for what that represents, I am saddened.

Kids Learn Life's Lessons On Ball Field

NEWARK, Del. — Kids can learn a lot from playing organized sports. In the microcosm of life that is the ball field, children realize the importance of teamwork and the value of persistence, patience and commitment.

Occasionally, kids learn less positive lessons. They may come to believe that winning is all that matters, or that they can't feel good about themselves if they aren't the star of the game.

According to University of Delaware Cooperative Extension 4-H agent Mark Manno, what a child learns on the playing field is influenced, to a large degree, by the philosophy of his or her coach.

"Coaches are the linchpin of the team," says Manno, who will soon be leading coaching seminars in New Castle County. "They set the tone for how the game will be played. A good coach teaches the basics of the sport and helps the children develop self-esteem and a sense of team. Most of all, a good coach makes sure that practices and games are a lot of fun."

However, many well-meaning coaches make the error of taking the game too seriously. According to Manno, some coaches feel that they are there to win as many games as possible.

That's the wrong message to send, especially to young children, the 4-H agent says. He believes that a moderate amount of competition is appropriate and even beneficial for children 9 and older. Competition allows middle-school-age youngsters to discover ways to be good losers — and good winners.

But an overly competitive environment can quickly squelch the enthusiasm of 5- to 7-year-olds in the Pee-Wee leagues.

"Young children are very sensitive," says Manno. "The biggest mistake coaches make with these kids is to criticize too much and too often. Instead, coaches need to work on encouraging young children in the things they do well."

Of course, the only way that coaches can do their job well is by having the support and involvement of parents.

"Parents must recognize that coaching isn't as easy as it looks," says Manno. "It's a difficult job — and remember, it's a volunteer job."

Parents can lend a hand by maintaining equipment, pitching in with coaching duties or treating the team to an occasional pizza. Parents also should inform the coach of their child's special needs, whether it's hyperactivity, allergies or developmental delays.

Share relevant information, but stifle the urge to brag about your child's hook shot or future NBA career.

"Parents foster competitiveness and create stress when they set unrealistic expectations for their child," says Manno.

Over the years, Manno says he has known many good coaches, but one man stands out in his mind. This Little League coach gathered his players around him after every game, win or lose, then each child shared at least one contribution he or she made to the game. In this way, the children began to learn the real meaning of team.

Cranberry Care

Fresh cranberries are packaged in film bags. Store them in the refrigerator for up to one month. Before using, sort out stems and any soft berries, then rinse cranberries gently in cold water.

You can easily freeze fresh cranberries for use all year. Simply freeze them in the original, unopened package and place in extra plastic wrap. Frozen cranberries will keep up to one year. When using frozen cranberries, don't thaw them — just follow recipe directions using frozen berries.

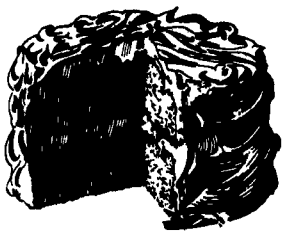
Home On The Range



Pumpkin Time In The Kitchen

Good pumpkin starts with a ripe pumpkin that has hard, shiny skin with no soft or rotten spots. Make sure the stem end has no soft spots. If this is soft, the rest of the pumpkin will spoil easily. Generally, smaller pumpkins are more tender. A five-pound pumpkin yields about 4½ cups mashed, cooked pumpkin, the amount needed for two 9-inch pies.

To cook, halve or quarter pumpkin and scoop out seeds and strings. Cut into smaller pieces and cut off rind.

To cook on range top: Place pumpkin in pan with a small amount of water. Cover and cook until tender. Drain, mash, and let drain again in a strainer to remove excess liquid.

To bake: Cut into pieces and bake in an ungreased baking dish pan in a 350 degree oven for 40 to 50 minutes. Scoop out pumpkin and mash.

One-half cup pumpkin provides five times the U.S. RDA for vitamin A. It also contains about 10 percent of the minimum requirement for potassium.

FRIED PUMPKIN

Slice neck part of pumpkin into ¼-inch slices and peel. Dip in slightly beaten egg; dip in cracker or bread crumbs. Fry until tender and golden brown. Use the round end of pumpkin for pies.

Another reader, Rhoda Sauder, writes that she sprinkles the sliced pumpkin with salt and lets set for 15 minutes before frying to help draw moisture from the pumpkin before dipping in flour.

How To Pare Thanksgiving Calories

If you are trying to lose weight or simply follow a low-fat, heart-healthy diet, you may look toward the coming holiday season with mixed emotions. Tempting high calorie edibles seem unavoidable, and some may even arrive in your home as gifts. How can you resist? Should you?

If you want to keep your caloric intake reasonable, even when indulging yourself, here are some ways to do so:

*For pre-dinner snacks, serve a selection of raw vegetables and sliced fruit with high-fiber flatbreads instead of high-fat crackers. Non-fat or low-fat yogurt or blended low-fat cottage cheese (flavored with herbs, spices, mustard, and horseradish) makes a good substitute for sour cream dips.

*Do not think you have to serve or drink high-calorie cocktails. If you offer alcoholic drinks, pour measured amounts and don't push refills. Champagne and other wines taste good when blended with juice or club soda. Serve flavored sparkling water on the rocks or blended with fruit juice, or alcohol-free Bloody Marys (highly spiced tomato juice).

*Don't eat the skin of the turkey, which contributes up to half the fat in a serving of poultry. Breast meat has fewer calories and less fat than dark meat. In fact, without the skin, poultry is one of the leanest meats there is.

*Baste your bird, moisten your stuffing, and make your gravy with flavorful but defatted stock. You can chill store-bought stock in the can and skim the fat before you use it. Or, some time before the holiday, make a generous amount of poultry stock and defat it. Stock freezes well in small packages and is easily thawed in a microwave.

*Serve sweet potatoes plain instead of candied, or mash them with orange juice and garnish with orange slices or pineapple. Acorn Squash and rutabagas are low-calorie substitutes for sweet potatoes.

*Plain, steamed green vegetables (such as string beans, Brussels sprouts and broccoli) and pearl onions without the cream sauce are an attractive addition to richer fare.

*Use skim milk rather than whole milk or cream in your mashed white potatoes. Let guests add butter if they want it.

*Make your own cranberry sauce, and experiment with smaller amounts of sugar than the package calls for. Add oranges, orange juice, and such spices as cloves and ginger.

*Remember that in most recipes two egg whites can replace one egg, and low-fat (1%) or skim milk works as well as whole milk.

Wild Game's Fat, Cholesterol Content

HUNTINGDON (Huntingdon Co.) — With hunting season around the corner, weight-watching hunters may want to know how wild game compares to domesticated meat in terms of fat an cholesterol.

"Many people in rural areas consume a significant amount of wild game," says Dr. J. Lynne Brown, associate professor of food science in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences. "But information on the fat and cholesterol content of deer, squirrel and other game often is lacking.

"Game meat tends to have the same amount of cholesterol as beef or pork, but considerably less fat than domestic meat," says Brown. Nutrition experts agree it is important for all adults — but especially those with heart problems — to limit their fat and cholesterol intake.

The National Cholesterol Education Program recommends that healthy adults limit their daily cholesterol intake to less than 300 milligrams and their fat intake to no more than 30 percent of total calories consumed daily.

The following table shows how wild game stacks up in comparison to beef and pork. The beef sample used is a well-trimmed USDA standard grade. All samples are 100 grams (3.5 ounces) of raw meat. The skin was removed from the birds.

Meat	Fat (grams)	Cholesterol (milligrams)	Calories
Beef	2 7	69	158
Pork	4 9	71	165
White-tailed deer	1 4	113	153
Mule deer	1 6	85	151
Antelope	1 0	113	148
Buffalo	3 2	45	146
Squirrel	3 2	83	149
Cottontail rabbit	2 4	77	144
Chicken (domestic)	0 7	58	140
Turkey (domestic)	1 5	60	146
Turkey (wild)	1 1	58	158

Many hunters and their families like to eat organ meats of wild game. The cholesterol content of both heart muscle and liver is high. Heart muscle contains 275 milligrams of cholesterol per 3.5 ounces of tissue and liver contains 450 milligrams per 3.5 ounces.

"The extent that you should worry about these cholesterol and fat figures should be balanced with how often you eat these organ meats," says Brown. "If heart stew is a once-a-year prized dish, a moderate portion shouldn't cause problems."

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

It seems that we are as busy as the squirrels who gather all the shellbarks before I get a chance to pick them up. But, my husband has been quite busy picking up bag after bag of black walnuts. This year we have had a market for them as certain farmers in our county have a machine to hull them. It can do a large quantity in a short time. One is in the eastern end of our county and lately we discovered another very near our home.

While he picks up nuts, I glean corn and husk it as the man who harvested our corn missed a lot. It was ground up with the high moisture corn and put into two large, white plastic bags. Surely was a pleasure to have our two-year-old grandson help me to peel the husk off the ears of corn. Let's hope it will be enough for the cows and heifers all winter long.

My 95 houseplants are now placed on every windowsill in the house. The two bay windows hold a lot of plants that I have repotted from the garden. I've dug all the lily bulbs and dahlias and stored them for the winter. Although, I did decide to leave some dahlias in the ground as I have too many.

I'm still getting a few strawberries and red raspberries off the plants on the hill behind our house. Somehow I appreciate the last things in the garden more as winter draws near. Yesterday I picked a few lima beans, some kale, broccoli and small heads of cabbage. The peanut plants that I dug were full of nuts but the cotton plant hulls have not opened. And, I have been covering my begonias and impatiens to protect them from the frost.

If you have high blood pressure, you may want to check out your minerals. Calcium, potassium, and magnesium prevent and manage hypertension, according to the National Institute of Health, so make sure you're getting enough. Major food sources of calcium are dairy products; of potassium are fruits and vegetables; and of magnesium are vegetables, legumes, and cereals. These three minerals (and sodium, of which we get plenty) regulate blood pressure and water balance in cells.

Girl Scouts Go Wild At Speedwell Lake

LYNN ROSSI
Special To Lancaster Farming

LITITZ (Lancaster Co.) — In a topsy-turvy world that seems to lack permanence and tradition at every turn, it's a fact that Girl Scouts are still earning badges for worthwhile efforts.

Although these girls sing and dance to the latest tunes on the Walkman and play Game Boy as much as any other youngster, they are willing to consider that there's more to life than videos and television. With a little bit of encouragement from their parents and considerable effort of local Girl Scout leaders, 70 Lititz Girl Scouts recently had the opportunity to earn a "Wildlife" patch at Speedwell Forge Lake, Lititz.

The "wildlife" dealt with the out-of-doors type, not the kind of erratic behavior you read about in the newspapers.

Arranged by a local Girl Scout organizer and resident of the lake area, Evie Bergey, the program featured three hours of activity designed to make the young participants aware that people can no longer afford to take the natural world for granted. Consistently mentioned as the greatest danger to creatures of the wild was loss of habitat.

Barry Pollock of Pennsylvania Fish and Boat Commission, bureau of law enforcement, along with Dale boyer, presented displays of fish and other aquatic life native to the Commonwealth.

Speaking about the importance of an untainted food chain, Pollack said that some companies are more interested in making a dollar than the environment. And the people who manage these busineeses are not only destroying vital aquatic life but also polluting someone's clean drinking supply.

His overview included explanations of spawning, habitat, coloration and endangered species. Ears were particularly alert ot information about the venomous snakes indigenous to the state. The two men distributed a large number of publications about fishing and boating.

A real highlight for each girl, though, was the opportunity to personally test the cruiser's siren and hand-held microphone.

Unknowingly and simultaneously, Mark Metzler of the Lancaster County Conservation District emphasized some of the very same points made by Pollack. While that could be a contributing factor to adult boredom, it is not with children. Hearing the same idea from different people using different words only reinforces the truth of what is being said.

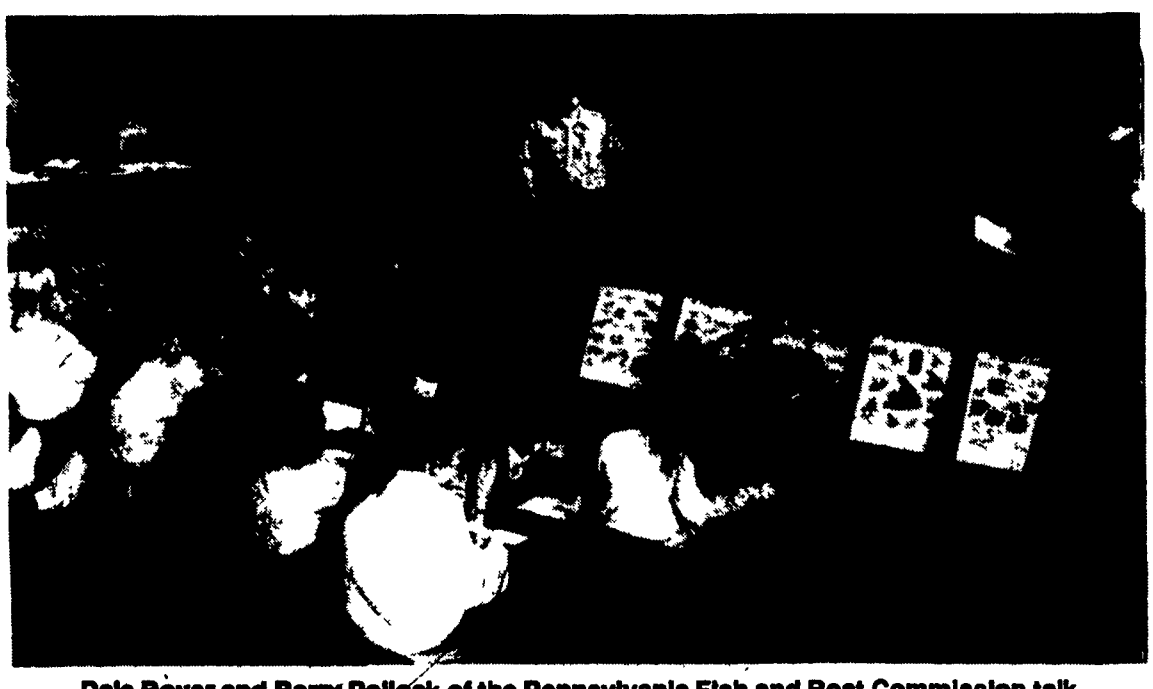
Both men cited the bog turtle as an endangered species on the local level. Metzler noted that in the Orient one of these little creatures can fetch as high as $600 on the black market. Of course the children were so busy absorbing this information that it never occurred to them to ask why, even though that was the adults' unspoken question. As it turns out, bog turtles are the perfect complement to bonsai forests.

Metzler said the turtles would live only three days without water and depending on their size and health only three months without food. He also pointed out that while water is primary to life, it's of no use when someone falls through ice in wintertime, and death occurs in a matter of minutes.

To emphasize that diminishing habitat endangers wildlife, he scattered on the ground three different colors of cards that represented food, shelter, and water. As deer competing in th ewild, the girls had to secure as much of each as they possibly could in order to survive. Although most were able to obtain some of each in the first round, dramatic results were noted when the number of cards were cut in half. Clearly some deer would die without the basics to sustain life.

On another hillside of the land bordering the lake, a couple of leaders played a game that emphasized the same concept: when a number of deer remain constant but the food, water, and shelter do not, deer will die.

Recognizing that all talk and no action does contribute to children's boredom, Bergey included a short hike in her itinerary. Of course, any wildlife in the area, with the exception of birds high in the treetops, instinctively recognized that this was a good time to make themselves scare. A domestic cat that followed the group was a real hit though.



Dale Boyer and Barry Pollock of the Pennsylvania Fish and Boat Commission talk about aquatic life in the state.

Fruitbelt Ministry Reaches Out To Migrants

BONNIE BRECHBILL
Franklin Co. Correspondent

CHAMBERSBURG (Franklin Co.) — The Rev. Ray Kauffman compares the migrant farmworker population to residents of Third World countries. But he ministers to them face to face, something local churches rarely have the chance to do with people from the Third World.

"It's easy to send money to Third World countries for missions. This is an opportunity to minister at home," Kauffman said. "These people are coming to our backyard. They have a different culture, language, and socio-economic background."

Kauffman, 58, is the director of Fruitbelt Farmworker Christian Ministry, with headquarters in Chambersburg. The year-round ministry covers Franklin, Adams, and Cumberland counties and is supported by numerous churches in the area.

It's hard for Kauffman, a United Methodist pastor since 1980, to say exactly how many people he and his staff reach. "The migrant population is hard to count; everyone has a different idea," he said. "A good estimate is 4-5,000 in the three-county area."

About 2,500 live in 120 camps in the orchards; the rest have private housing. The population peaks the week after Labor Day, during the apple harvest, although some migrant farmworkers arrive earlier to pick peaches.

About 200 farmworker families live in the area year-round, Kauffman said. They prune trees or work in other industries over the winter.

About 80 percent of the farmworkers are Mexican and Puerto Rican, with the rest coming from Florida, the Carolinas, Georgia, Jamaica and Haiti. Fruitbelt has two Hispanic interpreters on its staff, and one interpreter who speaks both Spanish and French Creole.

"The farmworkers are in a foreign country and a foreign culture," Kauffman said. "We tell them that they are not alone, that God is with them, and that we of the church are supportive of them. Jesus said to go into the highways and byways. We're going to where the people are."

For about 40 years, each county had its own committee of volunteers who ministered to the migrant farmworkers. In 1989, they came together and formed Fruitbelt, and Kauffman became its director.

Fruitbelt is coordinated through the Pennsylvania Council of Churches but receives no funds from them or from the government. The group's major fundraiser is selling gift boxes of fresh and packaged fruit from local growers.

"It's all local fruit picked by the workers we minister to," Kauffman said. They sold 650 of the boxes last year, and expect to sell 1,000 this year.

Fruitbelt's goal is to improve the quality of life for all persons in the fruitbelt.

To further this goal, Kauffman speaks to groups about Fruitbelt and trains outreach workers. He collects resources such as health kits (toothbrush, toothpaste, soap, towel, washcloth, toilet paper, razors and shaving cream), blankets, layettes, diapers, and financial support. "When the farmworkers come, we have to be ready," he said.

Fruitbelt's most visible outreach is the Adopt-A-Camp program, in which area churches befriend farmworker camps for the season. This year, churches have adopted 21 of the 120 camps.

Mary Cole of Fayetteville participates in the program with Fall-

Tell, Hear, See, Smell, Taste, Touch, Feel, Do

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

PRESCOTT (Lebanon Co.) — About 1,100 women gathered at the Lebanon County Extension Holiday Programs this past week. The annual workshop, offered three days and two evenings, has become a favorite with women searching for ways to build holiday memories with families and friends.

"Give more prescence rather than presents," said Karen Sando, mother and former extension home economists.

Long after the presents are forgotten, children will recall the times spent reading favorite Christmas stories or making holiday decorations together.

Rebecca Escott, Lehigh County home economist and columnist for Lancaster Farming said, "By giving generously of your imagination, thoughtfulness and love and a small investment of your time, you can bring pleasure to others with no strain on your budget. Such presents can bless the lives of others long after the holidays are over."

Escott encourages note and letter writing as way to to express emotions that may be more difficult to convey in person.

Classic and newly-released books about the holidays for children are often treasured gifts, especially if the sender reads the book aloud on a tape for the children to listen whenever desired.

Christenna Stamm demonstrated how to use crystal dishes and mirrors to decorate. Many of her ideas can be adapted to the crystal pieces you have on hand. For example, she took a strand of lights, bunch them together and put then inside an inverted clear glass bowl. Another bowl was set on top and filled with fruit and greens. Floating candles were used inside stemware pieces arranged on square mirrors. By adding greens, marbles and star garland, the arrangements added depth and sparkling imagery.

If you make your own wreaths and swags from grapevines, birch or willow branches, tie the ends and scraps with string and use as firestarters in the fireplace.

Susie Iezzi of Hillside Herb Farm told how decorations can be made to by enjoyed by both birds and people. She uses all natural materials in wreaths, trees, and other decorations. These are then hung on trees and fences for passerbys to enjoy and birds to eat. Here are some of her ideas.

Susie Iezzi

Bluebird Betty

1 cup sugar
1 cup raisins
½ cup shortening
½ cup water
2 cups flour
½ teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon baking soda
½ cup nutmeats

In a medium-size bowl, combine flour, baking powder, and baking soda. Set aside. Boil sugar, raisins, shortening, and water for 5 minutes. Add liguid mixture to dry mixture. Mix well. Add nutmeats. Spoon into well-greased 8x8-inch cake pan. Bake for 20 to 25 minutes at 350 degrees. Serve in pieces on feeder tray or ground feeder.

Feed the Birds Wreath

30-inch grapewine wreath
30-40 willow branches (10- to 12-inches long)
30-40 birch branches (10- to 12-inches long)
12 bittersweet branches (12- to 14-inches long)
1 bunch barley
1 bunch wheat
1 dozen strands millet
1 dozen dried sunflower heads
Hot glue gun and sticks
24 gauge florists wire
1 large bow

Tuck the willow and birch branshes into the grapevine base, secure with hot glue gun. Tie small bunches of barley, wheat and small branches of berries to wth wreath with florists wire. Weave in strands of millet. Hot glue sunflower heads onto the wreath. Tuck pieces of wheat and barley into any spaces that are empty. Attach a bow at the top of the wreath, with florist's wire. Replenish millet, wheat, barley and sunflowers when needed.

Arletta Schadler told the audience how to make "Give It Away Goodies" from the kitchen. Here are some recipes you can use in your holiday gift giving.

(Turn to Page B15)

The simplest arrangements are sometimes the most dramatic. Here, Arletta Schadler, extension home economist, glued rose hips to the top of a grapevine basket and filled it with apples.

Program participants examine a grapevine tree decorated with dried flowers.

Enjoy this tree during the holidays then place it outside for the birds. The tree is decorated with all natural materials such as bittersweet, barley, wheat, millet, orange and apple slices.

Use mirror imagery with greens, a strand of lights bunched together and placed under an inverted crystal bowl, clear marbles, candles, and golden star garland. Dazzle Dirt or Crystal Way, can be purchased from craft stores to add iridescence.

Holiday Memories

"Give more presence rather than presents," said Karen Sandoe, mother and former extension home economist.

A tabletop tree, made out of leftover greens stuck into a frame made from a wooden dowl and a sheet metal strip, is decorated with fresh fruit.

Swags and Garlands

Begin with a 10- to 12-inch sections of leftover branches of grapevine, birch or willow. Using 24 gauge floriest's wire, start to attach sections of varied lengths together with the wire. By keeping the wire on the spool, you achieve a more secure garland to decorage a stair case or other places you might want to wrap around the garland. Be sure to attach the twigs or pine with a beginning and an end. Secure the wire by snipping the end and wrapping the excess wire tightly under the last sections you joined together.

Canned Pumpkin Bread

3⅓ cups flour
2⅔ cups sguar
2 cups pumpkin
⅔ cup shortening
⅔ cup chopped nuts (optional)
⅔ cup water
4 eggs
2 teaspoons baking soda
1½ teaspoons salt
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 teaspoon ground nutmeg
½ teaspoon baking powder

Cream shortening and sugar. Beat in eggs, pumpkin, and water. Sift together flour, baking powder, soda, salt and spices and beat into pumpkin mixture. Add chopped nuts, if desired.

Fill 8 clean greased wide-mouth canning pint jars half full with prepared batter. Bake open jars about 60 minutes in an oven at 325 degrees. When done, quickly remove one hot jar at a time and clean its sealing edge. Immediately apply and firmly tighten a two-piece wide-mouth canning led. The lid will form a vaccum seal as the jar cools. Jars of cooled bread may be stored with other canned foods or placed in the freezer. The bread is safe to eat as long as jars remain vacuum sealed and free of mold growth.

For homemade gifts, make canned pumpkin bread and canned applesauce cake. These can be made months ahead of time and are easy to keep on hand for use as hostess gifts.

Need more containers to freeze Christmas cookies? Newly-released heavy duty plastic bags in 2-gallon sizes are heavy enough to protect cookies from freezer burn.

Rebecca Escott, who writes "Taking Time" for Lancaster Farming, encourages the audience to give gifts from the heart. She said, "Some of the nicest presents can't be bought in a stroe or wrapped up in a package."

Sensibly Delicious Chocolate Chip Cookies

3 cups all-purpose flour
1½ teaspoons baking soda
1 teaspoon salt
1¼ cups dark brown sugar
½ cup granulated sugar
½ cup butter, softened
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
2 egg whites
⅓ cup water
2 cups semi-sweet chocolate morsels
⅓ cup chopped nuts

Preheat oven to 350 degree. Combine flour, baking soda and salt in medium bowl. Cream brown sugar, granulated sugar, butter and vanilla in large mixing bowl. Beat in egg whtes. Gradually beat in dry ingredients alternately with water. Stir in morsels and nuts. Drop by rounded tablespoon onto lightly greased baking sheets. Bake for 10 to 12 minutes or until centers are set. Cool for 2 minutes. Remove to wire rackes to cool completely. Makes 5 dozen cookies.

Recipes for "Quick-Fix Company Fixin's" was demonstrated by Frances Dietz.

"When company's coming, you want something that guests will think took a long time to prepare but only took minutes," she said.

Joan Thomas of the Embroidery Guild answers questions about the Guild's monthly meetings.

The holiday program is a time for attendees to purchase dried flowers, bows, and arrangements from the Lebanon Flower Club.

Adams Capon Roundup

Are you looking for a delicious main course item for Thanksgiving? Why not a capon? Adams County 4-H members will be exhibiting their 4-H capons at 4-H Capon Roundup on Tuesday, November 23, at the Cashtown Firehall.

The Cashtown Lions Club and the Adams County Poultry Association cosponsor the roundup, which begins at 6:30 p.m. with dinner followed by a public auction of all the capons exhibited.

Each 4-H member is required to exhibit one pair of matched dressed capons at roundup. They are judged on finish; dressing; freedom from cuts, bruises, tears, and pin feathers; proper packaging and straightness of the breastbone and weight.

The capon project is one of more than 100 different project areas that youth 8-19 years old can get involved in as a member of 4-H. 4-H Capon roundup is a culmination of five months of long hard work for these 4-H members. The project involves raising at least 20 capons starting at three weeks of age until they weigh approximately nine pounds dressed weight. The members are involved in the day-to-day care of the birds, keeping financial records, and marketing.

If you have questions or need additional information about the 4-H Capon Roundup, contact the Adams County Cooperative Extension Office at (717) 334-6271 or (717) 624-4525.

Gloucester, N.J. 4-H

The Gloucester County, N.J. 4-H will be holding a tack sale on Saturday, November 27 at 10 a.m. at the Gloucester County office building, North Delsea Drive, Clayton, N.J.

If you are looking for a saddle, horse equipment, riding clothes or other items, stop in and take a look.

If you have items to sell, the fee is $10 per table. Helping children to outfit their horse or themselves at a very low cost is one of the many services for youth provided by 4-H.

York County 4-H Capon Roundup

The York County Capon Club held its annual roundup and sale at Rentzel's Auction Barn on October 21. The judge for the event was Dr. John H. Schwartz, cooperative extension director and poultry agent from Lancaster County.

Thirteen capons were exhibited with all entries receiving blue ribbons (scores of 90 or above based on the Danish system). In addition, there were three outstanding entries from Clover Buds. Clover Buds is a relatively new area for 4-H in which youngsters seven years old may participate, but are not in competition with regular 4-H members.

Taking home champion honors with his 10-pound capon was Paul Kitzmiller of Wellsville. Glen Rock State Bank purchased the champion for $20 per pound. Reserve champion went to Jonathan Werning of Mt. Wolf with his 11-pound 10-ounce entry. The reserve champion sold to Hartlaub Used Furniture for $9 per pound.

Robert C. Antram

Somerset Extension Director Retires

SOMERSET (Somerset Co.) — Robert C. Antram retired as the Somerset County Cooperative Extension director on June 1 after serving 36 and a half years with the cooperative extension in Somerset County, according to a Penn State news release.

Marie L. Kieffer, extension home economist, will fill the role of interim extension director and Antram's role will be left unfilled because of budgetary constraints, it said.

Antram's work began in Westmoreland County in 1954. He served with the U.S. Army Signal Corps at Ft. Hood, Texas, prior to coming to Somerset County in 1956. He was the agricultural and 4-H club agent. Several years ago, he assumed the role of interim director.

Under the shared leadership of Antram, Kieffer, and Robert Brown, the current Somerset Co. county agent, the Somerset Co. 4-H program has thrived with annual fund-raising events conducted by the county 4-H council. These include the rabies clinics and updating of Somerset Co. Plat books. Also formed in 1963 was the county 4-H Development Fund.

Other successful 4-H programs during Antram's tenure were 4-H public speaking, fashion and foods revue, demonstration, and judging contests. The continuing interstate 4-H exchange, which provides out-of-state travel experiences for the 4-H youth, has been recognized nationally. Some 11 4-Hers traveled the world through the International Farm Youth Exchange. Seventy-five of them participated in the national 4-H Club Congress held in Chicago, as Pennsylvania delegates since 1959. Sixteen have been national program scholarship winners.

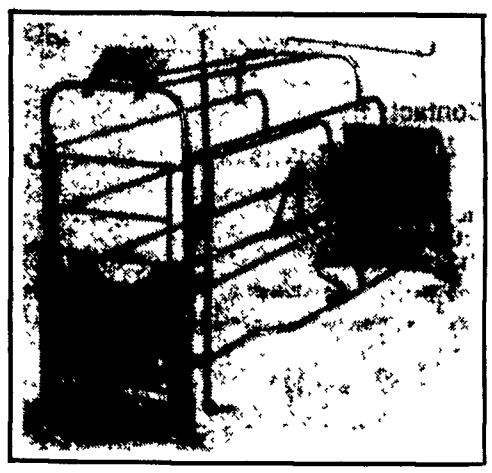
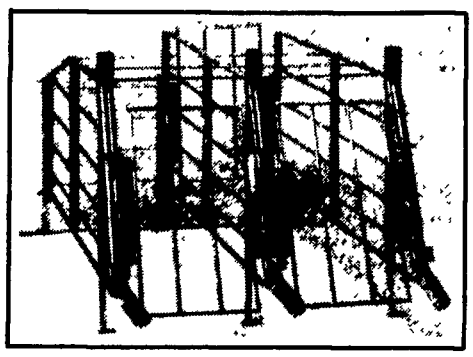
PIG SAVER "DUTCH CRATE"

Developed through testing in our research farms the goal was to develop a crate that nearly eliminates crushing, due to lay one, unmatched durability and be easy to work around. All this has been achieved by a unique gravity fliprail that forces sows to lie down slowly and using stainless steel for rear doors and legs, proven horizontal and solid steel rod construction. All this at a reasonable cost. Crate also can be installed on an angle.



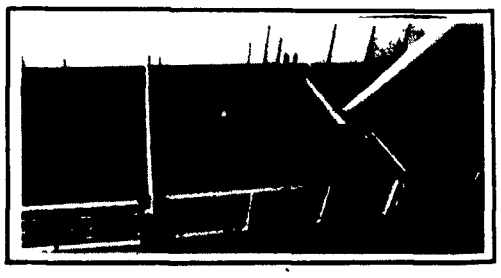


CONFINEMENT STALL

Developed recently in our R&D farm. Our goals were convenience, safety and durability. The low back and flat top rails are easy to reach over with no sharp edges. Stainless steel rear legs and front feet along with solid steel horizontal rods through punched uprights provide the strongest, most durable stall ever produced by Tri-County (21"-24" O.C. x 86")

NURSERY PENNING

Nursery penning has been improved by the use of an optional solid stainless steel panel on the front gates which keeps walkways clean. Stainless steel verticals on penning eliminates corrosion where penning attaches to the floor. Stainless steel drinker pipes & mounting brackets also increase durability.



FINISHING PENNING

Optional stainless steel verticals and fasteners offer improved durability over other similar types of penning. Loop and flapper latch arrangement eliminates the use of drop pins. Stainless steel fence line feeders provide excellent durability and a minimum of waste.

ing Spring Presbyterian Church, which has adopted Camp #1 of Mountain Brook Orchards, St. Thomas, for three years.

When the farmworkers arrive, church members take health kits and blankets to the camp "to get acquainted with them and to demonstrate our Christian love to these people who are in our community," Cole said.

The first year, all the workers spoke Spanish. The wife of the church's youth pastor speaks Spanish fluently, so she acted as interpreter.

"For last year, we all brushed up on our Spanish — and we got to the camp and they were all Haitian," Cole said. "It was a total shock."

Some farmworkers requested Bibles, Cole said, adding that many have a Christian background. Sometimes the church people lead devotions at the camp, "and the workers pray for us," Cole said.

Donna Brown is coordinator of lay ministries for First United Methodist Church of Chambersburg, which has adopted a camp for four years.

The farmworkers sometimes share their lives and beliefs. "People from the church are always deeply moved," Brown said. "They enrich our lives as well." Many of the workers have a strong faith, they are away from their families, and they appreciate the personal attention, she said.

In the peak season, four other paid chaplains and three volunteers assist Kauffman in the ministry to the camps, teaching, coordinating programs, doing personal consultation with the workers, and helping in emergencies. "It keeps us busy to cover all the camps. The time we can go there is limited, because of the farmworkers' work schedule." He and his staff cover the camps that are not adopted and keep in contact with the ones that are.

All activities are cleared with the orchard owners first, Kauffman said, and they are very cooperative.

At El Vista Orchards, Inc., Fairfield, owner Dave Benner raises 450 acres of apples and 150 of peaches. He employs 50 farmworkers at the peak of the season.

Hector Lebron has been coming to El Vista every summer for 22 years. The church that adopts his camp provides transportation for the men to attend church and visits them for volleyball games, he said.

Dave and Mary Margaret Kuhn own Kuhn's Orchard near Cashtown, Adams County. About 75 percent of their 150 acres of apples go to Knouse Foods; they also grow 75 acres of peaches and nectarines. To help get the crop in, they employ 25-30 farmworkers at the peak of the season. Fruitbelt uses Kuhn's packing house to assemble the fruit boxes.

The majority of workers in the camps are single men, while the families usually live in private housing.

Most of those "single" men, however, have families back in Mexico who depend upon them, Kauffman said. "They send the largest part of their check home to Mexico, then they need the basics from our ministry."

While Kauffman acknowledged that some of the men drink and cause trouble, "You have those few in any group," he said. "These are basically good, hardworking people."

At a camp for single men in Adams County, the workers prepared hot dogs and soup on their lunch break. Their huge kitchen is equipped with two stoves, three sinks, and two refrigerators. The large, clean bunk rooms held a fan and a television.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture estimates that each person eats about 90 pounds of fruit a year; in fact, most of the food on the average American's table is picked by a farmworker, Kauffman said. "If not for their skills, we wouldn't have these delicacies."

There is still a need for education in the community, he added. "Many people still don't see the farmworker as a valid asset to the economics of the community. The three-county area produces an estimated $33 million worth of fruit each year. Without the workers to pick the fruit, where would it be?"

Statewide, farmworkers pick mushrooms, tomatoes and grapes. They find the same attitudes in other communities, Kauffman said. "There's been a lot of change, but we've still got a way to go."

THE ALL-NEW MoCo's BY JOHN DEERE

NOBODY DOES HAY BETTER

NOBODY CUTS HAY BETTER. A 5-bar reel, new guards, and a 9-foot 9-inch cut give the 820 MoCo (above) a cleaner, 6-inch-wider cut. And an all-new, John Deere-built, rotary cutterbar makes the 920 and 930 MoCo's stronger and easier to maintain. All three use an innovative 3-point suspension for unbeatable flotation.

NOBODY CONDITIONS HAY BETTER. You can't beat the conditioning or simplicity. Choose John Deere urethane roll (sicklebar and rotary models) or V-tine impeller conditioning (rotaries only). All adjustments are made easily...many without tools. So matching field conditions is easy.

A column to update hog producers on the Pennsylvania Pseudorabies Eradication Program.

ASCS Announces Crop Program

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — Emergency disaster legislation signed recently by President Clinton authorizes USDA's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) to pay 100 percent of each eligible disaster claim filed by producers who sustained quantity and/or quality losses on their 1993 crops because of weather-related disasters.

"Eligible producers may apply for disaster assistance through March 4, 1994," ASCS official Richard Troutman said. He said the 1993 crop loss benefits will be paid to eligible producers after the producer submits all required information to ASCS.

To be eligible for disaster benefits, producers with crop insurance must have had losses greater than 35 percent. Producers without crop insurance must have had losses greater than 40 percent.

"Farmers who lost over 65 percent of their 1993 crops must purchase multiple peril crop insurance on the same crop for 1994," Troutman said.

The ASCS disaster program provides cash payments for production losses on participating program crops of wheat and feed grains; nonparticipating crops; soybeans, sunflowers, and tobacco; and all commercial nonprogram crops.

More information on 1993 crop loss benefits may be obtained from the local ASCS office.

THE PENNSYLVANIA VACCINATION PROJECT FOR GROW/FINISH HOGS

Dr. Amy Nesselrodt
Veterinary Services

In 1989, at the request of the National Pork Producers Council, the Cooperative State-Federal-Industry Pseudorabies Eradication Program began.

The goal was to eradicate pseudorabies from this country by the year 2000. Guidelines were established to assist states in reaching this goal.

The guidelines outline five stages of PRV eradication which demonstrate the progress states make toward eradication. At Stage V, the final stage, a state is declared free of pseudorabies.

Currently, Pennsylvania is in Stage II. It is the immediate goal of the Pennsylvania Pork Producers to advance the state into Stage III and then meet the goal of pseudorabies eradication in Pennsylvania by the year 2000.

Producers in Pennsylvania have been working hard to eliminate PRV from their herds. Unfortunately, in spite of their efforts, new herds continue to become infected. The major source of new infections continues to be area-spread.

Pseudorabies virus, which is shed in mucus from infected animals, can, under the right environmental conditions, travel through the air and infect other herds. One tool which is available to prevent such spread of virus is vaccination. More than 95 percent of quarantined herds are vaccinating their breeding animals but less than 50 percent of the currently 100,000 quarantined grow/finish animals are being vaccinated. These unvaccinated, infected animals serve as a reservoir for the virus and can act like "virus factories," spewing virus particles into the air.

In order to promote vaccination of grow/finish animals, the Pennsylvania Pork Producers Council is sponsoring the "Pennsylvania Vaccination Project." Producers with quarantined grow/finish herds are strongly encouraged to participate in this project. The success of preventing area spread of pseudorabies is dependent on maximum participation.

Participating producers will be asked to attend an initial informational meeting. Individual vaccination programs will be designed based on the situation of each individual farm. Management practices which include a vaccination program will be evaluated for performance and economic benefit.

It is anticipated that the results of the program will reduce the rate of new pseudorabies infections because of reduced virus circulation among grow/finish herds. With less circulating virus, all infected herds should have a better chance in eradicating the disease from their herds. It is hoped that with this intensive attack against PRV, Pennsylvania will soon be able to move into Stage III of the National PRV Eradication Program.

The project will also examine the economic value of vaccinating grow/finish pigs by looking at performance. Personnel from Penn State's Department of Veterinary Science, U.S. Department of Agriculture, and Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture will direct this program with the assistance of local practitioners. The project will allow for partial funding of cost of vaccinating grow/finish animals against pseudorabies on quarantined farms. Program personnel will provide guidance on vaccination techniques and will periodically visit the farms to check performance records.

Here is something often overlooked...

Only Patz gives you 45 years of experience with hook-and-eye chain, resulting in a chain so good that others are attempting to copy it.

Many Patz Gutter Cleaner chains are still working well after more than 30 years of use.

After the Patz patent on hook-and-eye chain expired, some other companies have attempted to copy the Patz chain Some promote 10- and 12-year warranties on chain—but they have not yet had 10 or 12 years of experience with hook-and-eye chain

Patz has continued to improve its chain for 45 years with special-formula steel, special forging techniques and special steel hardening processes.

Rely on the proven, long-life chain. Patz provides a 15-year chain warranty because so many chains are working well long after 15 years of use

WINTER VENTILATION: WHAT IS THE OBJECTIVE?

Dr. William D. Weaver, Jr.
Professor and Head
Department of Poultry Science

Maintaining desirable air quality in the poultry house during the winter months can challenge the most experienced producers.

On the one hand, they are required to tighten up their houses to eliminate drafts and reduce heat lost. However, on the other, they are asked to run their ventilation fans, which brings in cold outside air, in order to reduce moisture and control ammonia.

This almost seems paradoxical —a producer is expected to seal up his house but then run his fans to bring in cold outside air.

Is the objective to minimize fuel usage, or is it to completely rid the house of ammonia? Most growers would agree that it is neither of these, but rather it is to create an environment that will allow for the efficient and economical production of meat and eggs.

In order to accomplish this, growers must bring in adequate quantities of outside air, which in the case of growing birds will increase fuel consumption, in order to remove moisture and control ammonia. The keys to creating the proper environmental conditions are to:

- Provide adequate insulation (at least R19 in ceiling and R 12 in sidewalls).
- Eliminate all locations where outside air can infiltrate.
- Allow outside air to enter only through properly designed air inlets located at the eaves on both sides of the house.
- Direct the incoming air across the ceiling, allowing it to mix with the warmer inside air before it reaches the birds and the litter.
- Ensure that outside air is brought in at the proper velocity (minimum of 600 feet per minute or from .08 inch to .10 inch static pressure), allowing it to move across the ceiling.

Even though the outside air maybe cold and possibly high in relative humidity, it can be used to ventilate the poultry house during the winter months. The goal is to control ammonia by removing moisture. This is accomplished by bringing in cold outside air, increasing its temperature by mixing it with warmer inside air, allowing it to pick up moisture from the litter, and then exhausting the moisture laden air from the house.

A rule to remember is that the moisture-holding capacity of air approximately doubles for each 20 degree Fahrenheit (F) increase in temperature. For example: otuside air at 32 F and 100 percent RH (raining) can be brought into the house and warmed to 72 F, representing a 40 F increase in temperature. During the warming process, the relative humidity of the air is reduced from 100 to 25 percent, which, when moved across the litter, has tremendous ability to take up and remove large quantities of moisture.

Blindness among birds, ascites (excess fluid in the body cavity), skin irritations (ammonia burns), breast blisters, leg abnormalities, and severe respiratory infections are all directly attributed to increases in ammonia and litter moisture during the colder months. Properly designed and operated ventilation systems that bring in and exhaust the correct amount of air will minimize both ammonia and moisture, creating desirable environmental conditions. Ammonia should not be allowed to increase above 25 ppm (about the level most people start smelling the gas) and litter moisture above 30 percent (slightly moist with no caking).

Therefore, the objective is to maintain desirable air quality in the poultry house by controlling ammonia and moisture through bringing in small quantities of outside air. This can be done most efficiently in adequately insulated houses with properly designed and operated negative pressure ventilation systems.

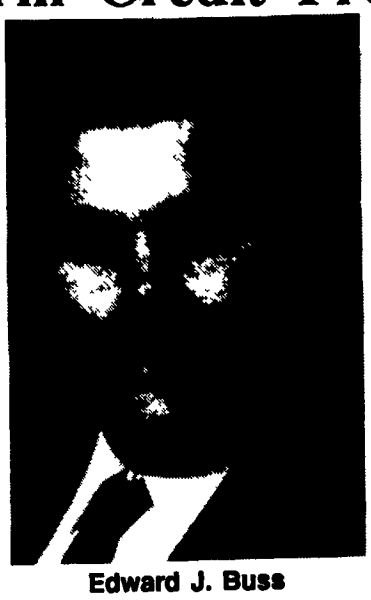
Keystone Farm Credit Promotes Buss

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Edward J. Buss has been named manager of the newly formed Lehigh Valley Branch of Keystone Farm Credit, ACA.

The Lehigh Valley Branch is a consolidation of Keystone's former Fogelsville and Tatamy branches. The announcement of both Buss' promotion and the branch consolidation was made by Keystone's president and CEO, Phillip W. Kimmel.

Buss is a native of Newburg, Northampton County. He was raised on his family's potato, beef, and chicken farm and was an active 4-H'er for 10 years. Buss received a bachelor's in animal husbandry from the University of Connecticut in 1966 and joined Farm Credit in October 1981 when the Tatamy branch first opened. Buss will be located in the Fogelsville office facility.



Edward J. Buss

All members affected by the consolidation have been notified, by letter, of any staffing change to their accounts. Both the Fogelsville and the Tatamy facilities will remain open to disburse funds and accept payments. Office hours will be unchanged; 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. The territories of both branches were evaluated, and will continue to be evaluated, in an effort to bring Keystone's members, in the Lehigh Valley, the most effective and efficient delivery of credit and other financial services possible.

Case Executives Note Industry, Company Progress

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. — The outlook for farmers, agriculture, and agricultural equipment sales is better than it's been in a long time, according to comments made recently by J I Case executives in conjunction with the North American launch of the new Case International 7200 Series Magnum™ tractors.

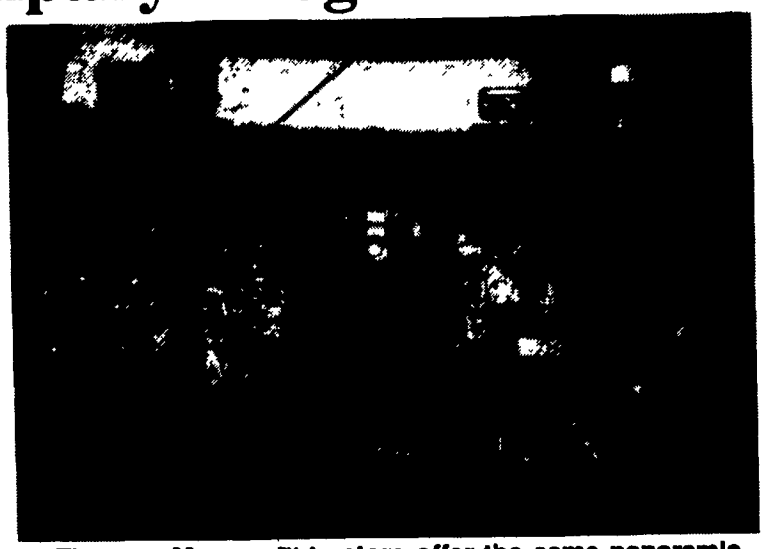
"A combination of factors is giving those of us involved in agriculture reason for optimism," said Richard M. Christman, J I Case senior vice president, sales and marketing-North America.

"Industry watchers are suggesting that the cyclical ag economy is finally starting a long-awaited upswing," he said. "We aren't expecting a dramatic change, but farmers have put off buying new equipment through a lot of lean years. And now, despite hard times for those hit by this year's floods and drought, we're seeing higher incomes for many farmers. When you couple these industry positives with generally improved economic stability and the lowest interest rates in decades, you can see why more farmers are finding the resources to modernize operations and upgrade equipment."

Christman noted that Case has seen its own business improve this year. Case recorded a profitable first half that was up markedly over the same period last year.

"Naturally, it helps that the industry is doing better, but we've taken decisive steps to return our company to consistent profitability," he said. "Specifically, during the past 18 months, we've honed our organization to improve efficiencies in manufacturing, marketing, and distribution. Most important is that every product we make today reflects responsiveness to customer requirements. These are steps we needed to take in order to be competitive on a global basis, and we're definitely seeing positive results."

Christman cited the new line of Magnum tractors introduced recently as a good example of how Case has set its priorities on meeting customer needs. "The new Magnum tractors are a line designed by and for our customers," he said. "This new 7200 Series reflects a great deal of customer input."



The new Magnum™ tractors offer the same panoramic visibility customers associate with the line while incorporating several modifications to improve productivity and comfort. One change is the addition of a new advanced air conditioning system that makes use of a more environmentally friendly refrigerant while retaining comfort levels farmers have come to expect from a Magnum.

Christman provided examples of how Case is gathering and applying customer feedback. He mentioned focus-group sessions and prototype testing that occur prior to the introduction of new products. "This isn't new for Case, but we are getting better at it. We're doing a better job of analyzing customer priorities and then making sure we address them in our engineering and manufacturing process," Christman said.

Herman F. Kosten, J I Case vice president, dealer sales-North America, noted that as part of the company's overall emphasis on quality and customer responsiveness, product support has become more important than ever. "Our No. 1 job at Case is to make sure we're fully satisfying the needs of our customers with the right products, at the right price, with solid parts and service support.

"Case International products are supported by more than 1,400 Case IH dealers across North America, and an integrated parts network that is prepared to ship genuine Case IH parts to our dealers within 24 hours when circumstances require," said Kosten.

"We're also very proud of our training programs," he said. This year nearly 3,000 dealer service personnel will travel to Case headquarters and region locations to make sure they're up to date on the most effective and efficient service techniques for Case International tractors, harvesting equipment, and implements.

The 16-foot flexible-fold John Deere 550 Mulch Master is well-suited for working hills, terraces, and contours. Transport width is a narrow 12 foot 2 inches. The optional electrohydraulic depth control permits fast, accurate depth adjustments from the tractor seat.

Deere Introduces Flexible-Fold Mulch Master

MOLINE, Ill. — John Deere has introduced a 16-foot flexible-fold version of its innovative 550 Mulch Master. The new model features a flexible design for working terraces and contours, a narrow transport width, a crank-adjust depth control, and an exclusive, electrohydraulic depth-control option.

John Deere introduced the 550 Mulch Master last year. It is a secondary tillage tool that leaves high levels of residue, thoroughly incorporates chemicals, takes out weeds, and prepares a planter-ready seedbed all in one pass. The new 16-foot flexible-fold model, for tractors in the 140- to 160-horsepower range, joins four other flexible-fold sizes (from 19 feet 2 inches to 32 feet 6 inches) and two rigid models (12 feet 8 inches and 16 feet) in the 550 Mulch Master line.

The 16-foot flexible design is well-suited for working steeper slopes and on and around terraces. The narrow 7-foot 8-inch mainframe and flexible wings follow contours for a thorough seedbed finish with plenty of residue left on top. The 12-foot 2-inch transport width is convenient for negotiating narrow gates, bridges, and roads.

The new crank-adjust, single-point hydraulic depth control makes fine-tuning operating depth quick and easy. One turn of the crank changes the machine's operating depth by 3/16 of an inch. This feature will be standard on all Mulch Master models beginning in the 1994 model year.

An optional electrohydraulic depth control (EHDC) is a John Deere exclusive. By using the electrohydraulic 3-point hitch controls on John Deere 7000 Series and larger 55/60 Series row-crop tractors, the operator has simple, fingertip control of the implement and can set both the operating depth and raise height from the tractor seat.

For example, on the 7000 Series tractors, the operator sets the implement depth and intermediate height on the hitch-command center. One touch of the raise/lower switch moves the implement between the depth and height settings. The intermediate setting makes taking out headland tracks or crossing waterways fast and easy. Holding the switch in the raise position lifts the implement to the full-raise position.

A depth indicator on the implement makes on-the-go depth adjustments with EHDC easy to monitor from the tractor seat.

EHDC will be available as an option on all Mulch Master models beginning in the 1994 model year.

Factory shipments of the new 16-foot flexible-fold 550 Mulch Master are scheduled to begin in March 1994.

Standard Blade Tilts To Cut Slopes

BELOIT, Kan. — KAN-AM Industries introduces a new pull-type grader into their full line of grader-scrapers.

The new Standard Blade, like its larger family of graders, is designed to be an economical way to level ground, maintain terraces and roads, and clean out feedlots, ponds, and waterways.

The Standard blade is 12 foot by 32 inches high and swings a full 50 degrees left to right. The blade lowers and raises to a high transport clearance and has blade tilt to cut slopes.

Grader-Scraper line of equipment ranges from 12 foot to 16 foot wide blades. Horsepower requirement for the Standard Blade is from 80 to 140 H.P. The larger models of Grader-Scrapers allow the use of four-wheel-drive tractors up to 300 H.P. List price of the new Standard blade is $5,900.

For more information, call (913) 738-3547 or write KAN-AM Industries, 1600 W. 8th St., Beloit, KS 67420.

Deere Announces 20-Foot No-Till Drill

MOLINE, Ill. — John Deere has announced a 20-foot model of its 750 no-till drill with 33 percent more capacity than the company's 15-foot 750.

The 20-foot model features a new semi-integral hitch, ground-drive disconnect, revised seed tubes, and optional high-flotation tires and seed population monitor.

John Deere also announced a new 750 no-till drill two-unit hydraulic hitch that easily posiuions two 15-foot models for a a 30-foot seeding width or a 15-foot 9-inch transport width in minutes.

The 20-foot 750 drill consists of two 10-foot drill boxes mounted in a rigid frame. Each box has its own clutch and drive system. The drill can be equipped with either plain grain or combination grain/fertilizer boxes with capacities of 2.8 bushels/foot and 3.4 bushels/foot, respectively. A special steel precoated with a baked enamel is used in key areas of the combination box for corrosion resistance.

A new, semi-integral category 2 or 3 hitch allows the drill to be hooked up to the tractor's draft links or quick coupler. This eliminates the need for a drawbar support. The hitch enhances maneuverability and transfers weight to the tractor for improved traction. A dual-caster-wheel hitch is available as an option.

Four 11L-15 tires support the rear of the machine. Optional 31x15.5-15 tires further improve flotation with more than 70 percent additional surface area.

The ground drive for the fluted seed meters features a disconnect for transport to reduce wear on chains, sprockets, and other moving parts. Revised seed tubes have a new molded elbow that provides more uniform seed flow to the openers.

An optional seed sensor kit accurately monitors seed population of large seeds such as soybeans. Four electronic sensors actually count the seeds as they pass through the seed tubes. The kit is compatible with the 200, 300, or 250 Computer Trak® monitoring systems. The sensors can be connected to the model 100 or 150 monitor if only flow monitoring is desired.

The 20-foot 750 features two ranks of 18-inch, single-disk openers that gauge depth at the point where the seed is delivered to the furrow for uniform emergence. The 20-foot model is available with 7.5-inch row spacing. An optional front-rank, lock-up quickly converts the machine from 7.5- to 15-inch row spacing. Each opener has only one grease fitting, located on the disk hub, for ease of maintenance.

An active hydraulic down-pressure system makes setting opener down-pressure across the drill simple and fast. When the system is connected to closed-center or pressure-and-flow-compensated tractor hydraulics, the "active hydraulics" permit the down-pressure cylinder to extend and retract to maintain uniform down-pressure on the openers for consistent penetration over uneven terrain. For open-center tractors, a single-point hydraulic down-pressure system is available as an option.

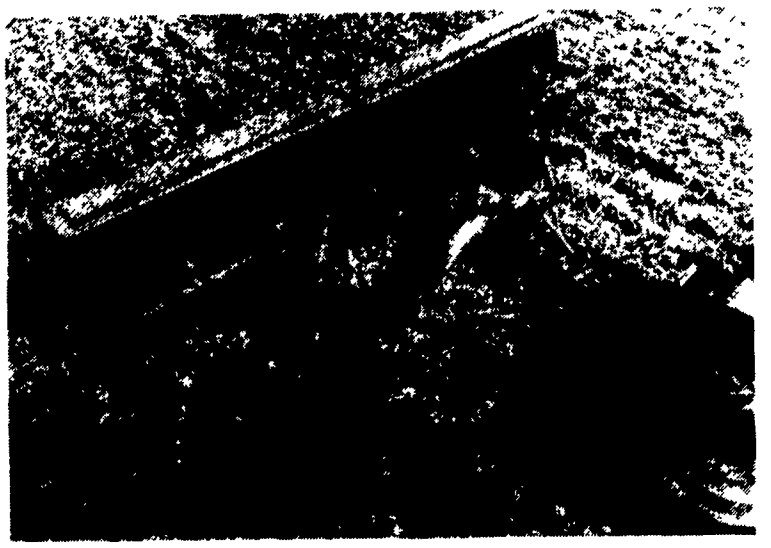
Other optional equipment includes a grass seeder attachment for use with small seeds such as alfalfa and grasses, and a half-speed drive kit for drilling at low rates.

The new 2-unit hydraulic hitch features a hydraulic motor, controlled by a toggle switch in the cab, that steers the dual castering wheels of the right-side, trailing drill.

To maneuver the drills into position, the operator releases two manual latches and, while driving the tractor forward, uses the toggle switch to position the "steerable" drill either behind or along side the "lead" drill.

An optional weight-transfer system counterbalances the weight of the 2-unit hitch mechanism on the front drill and is recommended for loose and soft soils.

The drills can be quickly separated for storage or service by removing a pin and disconnecting the hydraulic and electrical lines.



The John Deere 750 no-till drill 2-unit hydraulic hitch permits an operator to position two 15-foot 750 drills from a narrow 15-foot 9-inch transport width to a full 30-foot seeding width in minutes.

Maryland 4-H Livestock Judges Prepare For Finale

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — After a successful fall season at three regional youth contests, Maryland's 4-H livestock judging team is looking forward to national competition on November 16 during the North American International Livestock Exposition at Louisville, Ky.

Here's how the team has warmed up for the big event:

Eastern Sates Exposition

Maryland placed first in the overall standings among five state teams competing in the 4-H division on Sept. 18 at "The Big E - New England's Great State Fair" in West Springfield, Mass.

The Maryland team also finished first in reasons and first in swine judging. It was second — behind Pennsylvania — in sheep judging and second — behind Virginia — in beef cattle judging.

Randy Mullinix, 16, of Lisbon (Howard County) placed first among 21 individual contestants in both swine judging and overall standings. He also was first in sheep judging, and he tied for first in the reasons category with teammate Monica Feeser, 17, of Taneytown (Carroll County) and Ashley Craun of the Virginia team.

Monica finished fourth, in the overall standings. She and Randy were second and first, respectively, in senior 4-H livestock judging on Sept. 4 during the Maryland State Fair in Timonium.

Jason Murray, 16, of Glenelg (Howard County) was fifth in 4-H swine judging at "The Big E," fourth in sheep judging and ninth in reasons.

Melissa Harrison 18, of Day (Carroll County) was the fourth member of the Maryland team. A freshman at the University of Maryland at College Park, she substituted for Robert O. Dinsmore, 18, of Broad Run (Frederick County). At the time of the contest, Dinsmore was being honored at "The Big E" as FFA Star Farmer for the Northeast Region. He will compete for national honors during the 66th National FFA Convention set for Nov. 11-13 in Kansas City, Mo.

Eastern National Livestock Show

One week after its Massachusets victory, the Maryland 4-H team placed first in the overall standings among 11 state 4-H and FFA teams participating in youth competition during the Eastern National Livestock Show at Timonium, Md.

Maryland also was first in sheep judging, second in beef cattle and third in reasons.

This time, Jason Murray was first in the overall standings, and Randy Mullinix finished second. Randy placed third in swine judging and second in reasons.

Bob Dinsmore was first among all individuals in sheep judging; Jason Murray was second; and Randy Mullinix third.

Keystone International Livestock Exposition

Maryland placed second overall among 10 state 4-H and FFA teams participating in the junior livestock judging contest on Oct. 2 during the Keystone International Livestock Exposition at Harrisburg, Pa. The team also was second in both reasons and swine judging, third in sheep and fifth in beef cattle judging.

Randy Mullinix jumped back into first place among 39 individuals in the overall standings. He also placed first in swine judging, seventh in beef cattle judging, and sixth in reasons. Monica Feeser was second in reasons.

Bob Dinsmore placed third in sheep judging at Harrisburg, and Jason Murray was third in swine judging.

Coaching the Maryland 4-H livestock judging team again this year is William A. Curry of Shepherds Glen (Howard County), an Extension livestock specialist for the University of Maryland at College Park.

Curry has been the Maryland coach for more than 20 years. His assistant this year is Karen E. Holloway of Darlington (Harford County), a former 4-H member of a Curry-coached team. Holloway is an agricultural science agent for the cooperative extension service in Howard County.

Horses To Arrive

WASHINGTON (Washington Co.) — On November 20, 1993, approximately 125 healthy and trainable wild horses recently rounded up from Western rangelands will be offered for adoption here at the Washington County Fairgrounds.

The adoption is sponsored by the Department of Interior, Bureau of Land Management. Since the Adopt-A-Horse Program began in 1973, more than 110,000 animals have been adopted.

"The BLM has the responsibility for managing the nation's public lands, most of which are located in the Western states, and to preserve the mustang as a living symbol of the Old West," said BLM Director Jim Baca. "We periodically gather excess wild horses and burros off the range and offer them for adoption. The Adopt-A-Horse Program is the only way to maintain an ecological balance between wild horses, native wildlife and domestic animals grazing on western public lands."

Wild horses are gathered in Nevada, Wyoming, California, Utah and Oregon. Before being transported to satellite adoption centers in the East and Midwest, all animals are vaccinated, blood tested, and dewormed. Each animal is inspected by a veterinarian and given a clean bill of health before being shipped.

To qualify to adopt up to four animals, applicants must have a sturdy corral at least six feet high, shelter, transportation, and means of caring for the animals. The adoption fee of $125 per horse is payable in cash or money order at the time of the adoption. The fee helps defray the federal government's cost of roundup, veterinary care, transportation, and administrative expenses. After an animal has been adopted, BLM contract personnel will halter and load the animal for the adopter.

The horses will arrive at the Washington County Fairgrounds between the hours of 8 a.m.-10 a.m. on Friday, November 19, with viewing hours from 1 p.m.-5 p.m. The scheduled hours for the adoption will be from 7 a.m.-5 p.m. on Saturday, and if any horses are still available, Sunday from 8 a.m.-5 p.m.

For applications and more information, contact Bureau of Land Management, P.O. Box 631, Milwaukee, WI., 53201-0631, (414) 297-4417. Applications to adopt should be received before November 15.

FORAGE QUALITY IN PERSPECTIVE: WHAT DETERMINES QUALITY

Dr. Marvin Hall
Penn State University

Fluctuations in milk prices, feed costs, and government programs are forcing dairy farmers to become more effieient with their farm operation. Since feed accounts for approximately one-half of the total cost of producing milk, and high quality forage optimizes the productivity of the animals, increasing the quality of forage available is one of the best methods of improving overall feeding efficiency.

To effectively produce high quality forage, it is necessary to understand what factors determine forage quality.

What Determines Forage Quality?

• Plant composition. All forage plants are composed of cells having fibrous cell walls for support and protection. Contained within the cells are several soluble compounds, most of which are highly digestible (Figure 1). Since cell wall material is the primary consituent of forages, one of the main objectives of forage analysis is to characterize the cell wall fiber.

Plant fiber has three major components: cellulose, hemicellulose, and lignin. Cellulose and hemicellulose are digestible to some extent by ruminants. Ruminants can convert these fiber components to energy because the rumen provides the correct environment for bacteria and other microorganisms that actually break down the fiber. Lignin is indestible, and thus cannot be used by ruminants for energy.

• Plant morphology. Both grasses and legumes have two main plant parts —leaf and stem. As a structural component of the plant, stems typically contain more fiber for support. Leaves, on the other hand, provide a means for capture and utilization of energy from sunlight and tend to be lower in fiber content than stems. Given the large difference between the digestible fiber of stems and leaves, the proportion of leaf to stem in a given forage plant relates directly to its forage quality.

How Is Forage Quality Determined?

• Physical appraisal. Appraisal of a forage based on sight, smell, and touch can provide some general information, but chemical analyses are needed to asses the economic potential of the forage.

At a recent forage meeting, approximatley 80 forage producers and industry people were asked to rank four bales of hay by a visual appraisal of their forage quality. The hay ranged from pure alfalfa to an alfalfa-grass mix. An objective quality evaluation of the same bales, based on relative feed value (RFV), found considerable differences among them. There was no consistent pattern in the ratings by individuals but, in fact, the bale judged best on the basis of apperance had the lowest RFV of the four (Figure 2). Clearly, objective forage analysis is required.

• Chemical analysis. The Van Soest Fiber Analysis System separates feeds into distinct fractions that relate to their nutritive value. Neutral detergent fiber (NDF) consists of the total fiber in the forage and relates negatively to forage intake by ruminants. Acid detergent fiber (ADF) is composed of highly indigestible fiber and relates negatively to forage digestibility. Total nitrogen concentration in the forage (usually expressed as crude protein) is also a useful measure, since adequate intake of nitrogen is essential for animal productivity.

Forage laboratories analyze samples for NDF, ADF, and total nitrogen. It is also possible to accurately estimate these components using near infrared reflectance spectroscopy (NIRS). Other estimates of forage quality, such as total digestible nutrients (TDN), net energy of lactation (NEL), and relative feed value (RFV) are derived from mathematical manipulations of NDF and ADF values.

Proper Sampling

Clearly, forage quality can be extremely variable and, as in soil testing, proper sampling technique is essential. Without a representative sample, the results from a laboratory analysis are useless. When an alfalfa-orchardgrass hay bale was sampled correctly with a coring device and compared with a grab sample taken from the same bale, their analyses differed considerably (Table 1). A University of Minnesota study showed a large range in quality in a single load of baled hay where NDF values ranged from 34 to 54 percent among individual bales. Good sampling technique, therefore, must involve using the proper sampling equipment, and taking an appropriate number of subsamples.

What is Quality Forage Worth?

The value of high quality forage in a balanced ration is evident in Table 2. When three hays of low, medium, and high quality, along with corn silage and a mixed feed grain are used to balance a ration, total feed cost for the high quality hay ratio is $0.11 less per cow per day than the medium quality hay ration. Income over grain cost is $0.45 more per cow per day for the high quality hay ration than for the medium-quality hay. For 100 cows over a year, this difference is greater than $16,000. Low quality hay does not allow an animal to consume enough digestible energy to be highly productive. A hay of lower quality than the three hays in Table 2 would substantillay depress the performance of high producing dairy cows.

Keeping Quality In Perspective

If you want to produce high quality forage, keep in mind the ranking of quality factors and their relative contribution to quailty. While all six factors described are important, using high quality varieties will be advantageous only when the other five factors are operant. Quantity (yield) of forage is also a major considertion. Evaluate your total forage requirements and then select the crop and the appropriate acreage of that crop that best meets the needs of the group or groups of animals to be fed.

It ultimately comes down to economics. High quality forage can help keep farmers in the dairy business.

Water Conservation, Recycling Topics Of Conference

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Environmental concerns will be addressed by several speakers during the afternoon and evening sessions of Maryland's 49th annual Dairy Technology Conference at College Park.

The all-day event is scheduled November 10 at its usual location, the College Park Holiday Inn, near the intersection of U.S. Highway 1 and the Capitol Beltway (I-495). Sponsoring organizations include the Department of Animal Sciences and Cooperative Extension Service, University of Maryland at College Park.

. Roy E. Carawan, a food engineering extension specialist from North Carolina State University, will lead off the afternoon session with "Water Conservation and Pollution Prevention for the Dairy Industry."

Carawan will speak again at the evening dinner meeting on "Environmental Concerns for the Dairy Industry."

Following Carawan on the afternoon program will be Joan C. Williams from the Stone Container Company of Hopewell, Va. Williams will describe her company's program for "Recycling in the Dairy Industry." This program deals with waste materials such as paperboard cartons and plastic wrap.

Also on the afternoon agenda, Robert L. Walker, Maryland's secretary of agriculture, will give a 30-minute response to recommendations in the Maryland Dairy Task Force Report submitted last spring.

That report contained recommendations intended to ease the financial strain for both dairy farmers and dairy processors in Maryland.

Other afternoon topics will deal with updates on animal drug issues, food labeling, vitamin fortification, and reduction of somatic cell counts in milk.

The morning session also will include government regulatory updates, production of high-quality milk, and "total quality management" for the business world. Addressing the latter topic will be Francis B. (Frank) Alt of Ellicott City. Alt is an associate professor in the College of Business and Management, University of Maryland at College Park.

The Dairy Technology Conference is open to all persons with an interest in dairy foods or milk production. A $15 fee is charged for advance registration, including lunch. Registration at the door is $20 per person. Separate reservations need to be made for the evening dinner, which is a joint meeting with the Dairy Technology Society of Maryland and the District of Columbia.

For preregistration forms and program information, contact Robert R. Peters, 1103 Animal Sciences Bldg., University of Maryland, College Park, MD 20742. Peters is the Dairy Technology Conference coordinator and an extension dairy specialist. His office telephone number is (301) 405-1401.

BREWEX - For Use In Dairy Feeds

BREWEX is used extensively in complete dairy formulations to contribute utilizable energy. It is a price/performance value when used in dry feeds, liquid feeds and on-farm mixes.

MIX WITH DRY FEEDS: BREWEX is found in commercial pelleted rations for dairy, hogs and poultry as an energy source to replace corn. BREWEX replaces corn on a pound for pound dry basis and provides for improved pellet durability, reduced mineral segregation, dust control and improved palatability in dairy rations.

ON-FARM MIXING

A commercial Jersey dairy farm, having over ten years of experience in feeding BREWEX to partially replace corn finds that

- BREWEX replaced 5% to 10% corn/day
- BREWEX improves butterfat about 0.1%
- BREWEX mixed with forage reduces mortality due to displaced abomasum
- BREWEX helps cattle to stay on feeds

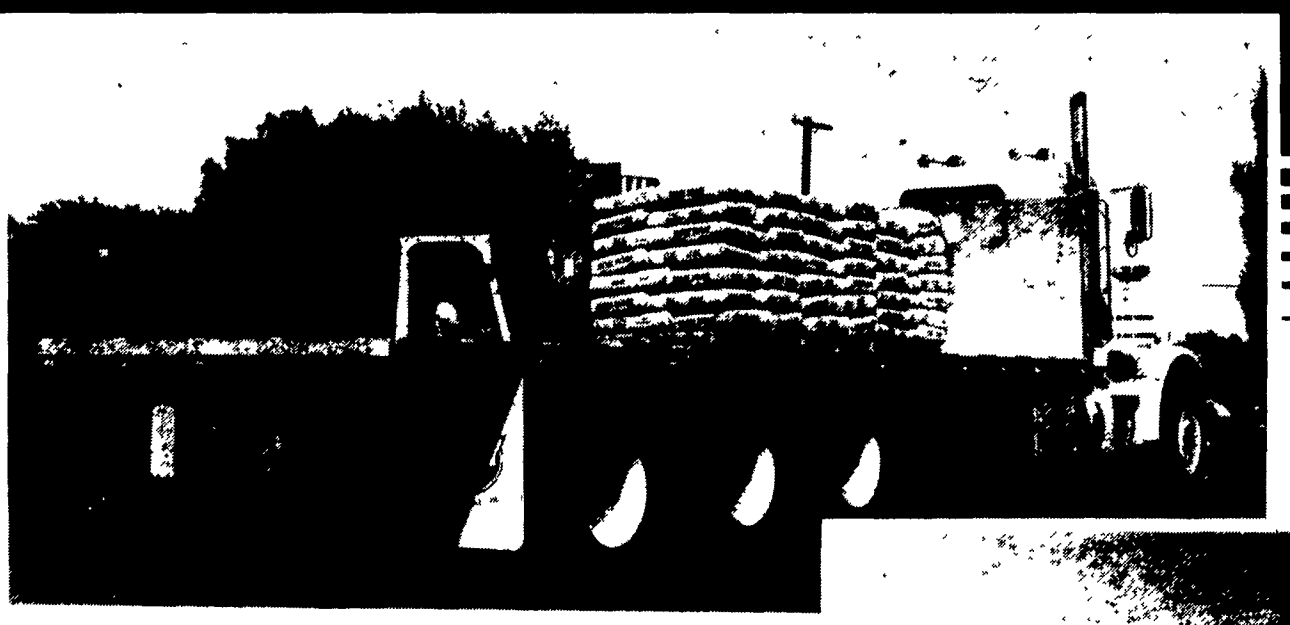
EBY ALUMINUM FLATBEDS: WE MAKE HARD WORK LOOK GOOD



On the farm or in the city, Eby aluminum flatbed bodies are built for your toughest hauling jobs. Their all-welded construction features 3" aluminum I-beam crossmembers (4" I-beams on bodies 16' and longer) on 12" centers, heavy side rub rail and aluminum diamond floor plate. A full list of options includes slated or solid aluminum sides, tool boxes and tire carrier.

Eby aluminum construction is up to 40% lighter than steel, so you get more payload capacity. The corrosion-resistant aluminum never needs painting and requires minimum maintenance but gives you maximum resale value. That's a winning combination to complement any truck.

In standard lengths to 32 feet and 5 widths from 78 to 102 inches, there's an Eby aluminum flatbed that's matched to your requirements. With Eby value and quality, hard work can look good.

New York dairy producer is convinced . . .

"There is a difference in hybrids for corn silage"

As operator of a 250-cow milking herd near Adams, N.Y., Larry Stinson was intrigued by data from Cargill Hybrid Seeds showing that some corn hybrids harvested for corn silage are more digestible and have better feeding qualities than others.

"But even though I am a Cargill Hybrid Seeds dealer, I had to sell myself first," said Stinson. "The concept sounded interesting, but I wasn't going to recommend it to my customers before I was comfortable with the program. Like other dairymen, I had generally thought that corn silage was corn silage and that total tonnage per acre was about all that mattered."

To "field-test" the concept, Stinson filled two upright silos with two different Cargill hybrids. One contained a hybrid that the research showed to be more digestible than the other.

"Although it wasn't scientific research, I was amazed that cows fed from one of the silos consumed five pounds more dry matter of total ration and produced more pounds of milk per day than when they were fed from the other silo. Now I use the program to recommend silage hybrids for all of my customers," he said.

Wide Quality Differences

University and Cargill Hybrid Seeds research conducted since 1987 shows large differences in both forage and grain yields, and in silage-quality attributes for different hybrids. Cargill research shows the average hybrid differences for the following traits: Neutral detergent fiber (NDF)-17%; crude protein-14%; fiber (NDF) digestibility-12%; and whole plant digestibility-6%.

Those quality differences can amount to thousands of dollars per year from reduced soybean meal and corn supplement costs.

Dr. John Ferry, a dairy management consultant who works with Stinson, said hybrid differences in digestibility and other feeding traits have important bottom-line implications.

"I think we too often latch onto every feed product or gee-whiz thing that comes along that might increase total production without looking carefully at the cost implications," said Ferry. "But cost per hundredweight of milk is what's important. And hybrid selection for quality traits is an important method of improving production without increasing costs. Improved rumen digestibility means cows will consume more, increasing milk production. And by improving rumen digestibility we can reduce input costs from other feed sources," he said.

A Menu Designed For You

Cargill Hybrid Seeds has developed a database of corn-silage traits that can be used to identify hybrid genetics with superior tonnage and enhanced feed value. The resulting menu—divided by maturity groups—lists key forage quality traits that show which hybrids within a maturity are best suited for corn silage production.

To determine the hybrids with the highest profit potential for your dairy or beef cattle, contact your local Cargill Hybrid Seeds dealer. Or, call 1-800-657-4810.

FFA Members Receive National Recognition

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — National recognition will be given to Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Virginia, and West Virginia FFA members at the world's largest annual youth gathering, the 66th National FFA Convention, to be held here, November 11-13. More than 29,000 FFA members, guests, and supporters are expected to attend.

The convention will feature action-packed sessions with addresses by top speakers from the fields of agriculture, education, government and entertainment. Confirmed speakers include Senator Larry Craig of Idaho; Dr. Augusta Kappner, assistant secretary for vocational and adult education, USDE; Dr. Jackie M. Allen, president of the American School Counselor Association; motivational speaker Emory Austin; Miss America Kimberly Clarice Aiken from South Carolina; cowboy poet Baxter Black; CNN news reporter John Holliman; Geri Jewell, actress, lecturer and comedienne; former FFA member John Thompson; and former national FFA secretary, Coby Shorter III.

Shorter is sponsored by the Western Retail Implement and Hardware Association as a special project of the National FFA Foundation. Thompson is sponsored by Cargill; Austin is partially sponsored by United Telephone — Midwest; and Miss America is sponsored by Chevy Trucks. Black's travel is provided by Passport Travel.

Opening night festivities on Wednesday, Nov. 10, will include a performance by Grammy award winner Lee Greenwood, sponsored by Commerce Bank of Kansas City.

In addition, convention participants will have opportunities to attend leadership workshops, tour Kansas City manufacturing and agribusiness sites, take in American Royal Livestock Show and Rodeo performances, and meet with fellow FFA members from around the nation.

Other highlights will include the selection of top FFA members in 29 agricultural proficiency award areas, 12 national career skill competitions, plus prepared and extemporaneous public speaking contests, and a parliamentary procedure contest. The American Star Farmer and American Star in Agribusiness will be named, and 1,276 members will receive the American FFA Degree, the organization's highest award. Top chapters in safety, community development and overall chapter activities will also be recognized. In addition, the 1993-1994 national FFA officers will be elected and installed. The National Agricultural Career Show and the National FFA Alumni Convention are held in conjunction with the FFA convention.

Extension Appoints Director

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Craig S. Oliver, state director for the University of Maryland Cooperative Extension Service, announced the appointment of Dr. Nancy M. (Nan) Booth as interim associate director.

Earlier this month, Oliver assumed additional duties as interim dean for the College of Agriculture, University of Maryland at College Park. Oliver also is scheduled to become interim director of the Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station on Jan. 1.

As the interim associate director, Booth will serve as a member of the College of Agriculture administrative team at the University of Maryland, assisting the dean with extension matters.

She also will provide leadership for the administration of organizational policies that pertain to county and regional faculty members, and she will assume a leadership role for extension programs throughout Maryland in consultation with department chairpersons, county extension directors, and the extension administrative council.

Finally, she will communicate information about extension programs to federal, state, and local government officials — as well as various organizational leaders — in consultation with the dean.

Booth began her professional extension career in Maryland in 1973 as a home economics agent in Baltimore, where she supervised a citywide expanded food and nutrition education program and chaired a staff of 20 extension professionals and assistants.

She moved to the University of Maryland at College Park in 1977 for a two-year stint as a graduate assistant in agricultural and extension education, earning a doctorate in adult education in 1979.

Following a two-month assignment as an urban community educator in Baltimore, she became assistant director of the newly organized energy technical assistance program, serving as a liaison officer with two other University of Maryland units and the former Maryland energy office.

This was followed by an assignment in 1982 as an energy specialist for Extension's Community Resource Development and Energy programs in Maryland. Since 1988, she has been a regional extension director, supervising extension agents in southern Maryland and urban counties in the Baltimore-Annapolis-Washington, D.C., corridor, as well as Baltimore city.

A native of Elizabeth, N.J., Booth was graduated from the Benedictine Academy. She holds a bachelor's in secondary education from Seton Hall University and a master's in family studies and resource economics from Michigan State University, in addition to her doctorate from the University of Maryland.

She was an elementary school teacher for four years (1967-71) at private schools in Elizabeth and Bayonne, N.J., and New Paltz, N.Y., with responsibility for literature, mathematics, and social studies programs in grades 5-8.

Her list of honors in recent years includes the 1993 Distinguished Service Award from the international Community Development Society and a 1986 national award for energy innovation from the U.S. Department of Energy for her extension-sponsored "Small Town Energy Education Program (STEEP)." STEEP was begun in 1984 with a grant from the former Maryland Energy Office.

Booth helped to coordinate "Enhancing Community Vitality," an annual symposium during the 1980s for Maryland's public officials, agency workers, and volunteer community leaders.

The referendum period began November 1 and will end November 15. Any Pennsylvania sheep or lamb producer with at least one animal will be eligible to vote.

State sheep and lamb producers received ballots prior to November 1. For more information, or to request a ballot, contact Ed Arnold, Bureau of Market Development; Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, 2301 North Cameron Street, Harrisburg, PA 17110-9408, (717) 787-2376.

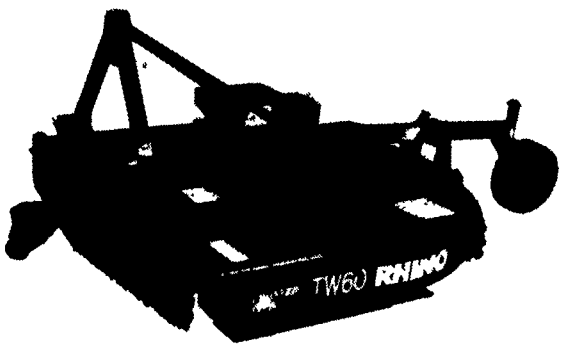
TWISTER

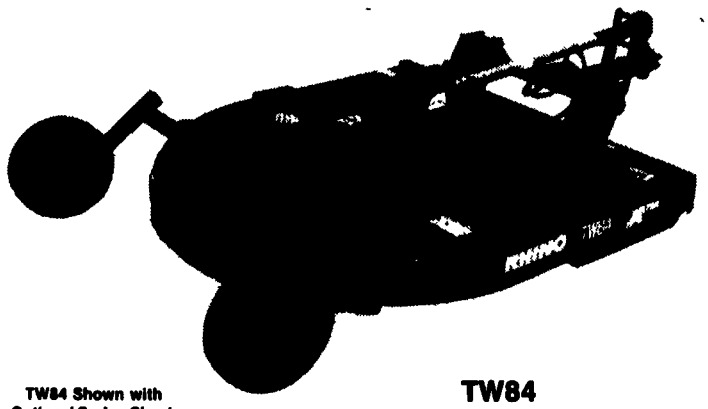


TW60

The TW60 mows a full 5' swath and is available in 540 RPM and three-point lift The TW60 requires only a '30 HP tractor (with adequate front weight) to save on operating costs The tail-wheel beam of the TW60, 72, and 84 lift-type cutters are easily adjustable for different cutting heights

TW72

The TW72 mows a 6' swath of material and can be operated on a tractor as small as 40 HP (with adequate front weight) The floating top linkage of the "A" Frame allows the TW cutters to follow the contour of the ground in rough conditions without damage to the hitch



TW84 Shown with Optional Spring Shock Absorber

TW84

The TW84 mows a 7' swath and is available in 540 or 1000 RPM and as a pull- or lift-type unit to fit a wide range of tractors An optional heavy-duty "A" frame is available for working in demanding conditions The lift-type unit is available with one or two tail-wheels and requires a 60 HP tractor (with adequate front weight) while the pull-type TW84 requires only a 30 HP tractor for many conditions A parking jack is standard on pull-type units

It Takes A Sunflower Ripper To Take This Type Of Punishment, So Buy Heavy Duty Tillage, Buy Sunflower And A New Case IH Magnum Tractor From Binkley & Hurst For Outstanding Performance

This series of photos shows a deep-tillage device called a V-ripper as it digs 15-inches into the soil to loosen the hard-packed soil. In hay for more than 25 years, the field was used for many years as a parking lot at Ag Progress. Over the years, during dry and wet conditions, cars and other equipment packed the soil, inherently full of rocks and clay, which helped contribute to compaction. Also called a subsoiler, the V-ripper breaks up the lower layers of topsoil and the subsoil to allow for better plant root growth. The subsoiling demonstration was one of several tillage demonstrations that visitors could see at this year's Ag Progress Days.

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — Once upon a time, they needed a place to put cars. So they used a hay field.

The hay field, you see, goes back, way back to a time before tons of cars and equipment were invited onto it, in conditions rainy and dry, to pack it down.

Its usefulness as a parking lot served well, but for growing crops, well, that was in question. It was solid hardpan. Dusty and rock. Nearly unfit for farming.

Until a deep tiller, what tillage experts call a "V-ripper", arrived one day.

Despite the rocks, clay, hardpan, and dry, dry soil, the V-ripper did its job, and dug down deep — 15 inches deep, to be exact. The subsoiler helped loosen and dislodge the compaction layer so harmful to good root growth and overall crop condition.

The photos here depict the "V-ripper" at work during a special deep tillage demonstration on Tuesday afternoon at Ag Progress Days.

There's nothing more important to a crop than early, even emergence. To get it, you need accurate, even seeding.

The 5300 has earned a reputation for its seeding precision, a function of its exclusive feed cup design and dependable disk openers. And, to improve placement of seed, the opener drawbars are heavier than on previous models. Press wheel and opener bearings are heavier for long life operation.

Along with accuracy, the 5300 gives you fast, high capacity seeding, so you spend less time refilling hoppers.

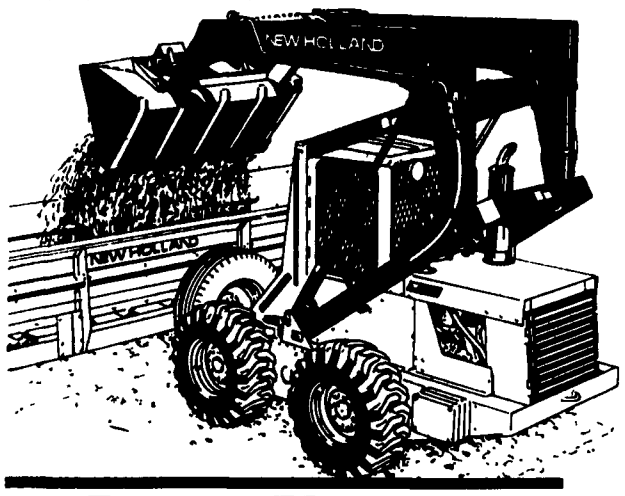
THINK BIG!



LOAD...UNLOAD FASTER AND EASIER

When you're working the big loads you need the Super Boom advantage—extra reach.

With more forward dump reach you can center load your largest spreader from one side so you get an even load. The result: faster loading, fuller loads and easier unloading.

With level bucket lift you load more and lift higher. . . with less spillback. And, with a longer wheelbase there's more stability and safety.

Find out how good a skid-steer loader can be.

REMEMBER THE 3 LAWS OF HOOBER RECONDITIONED AXIAL-FLOW COMBINES...

LAW #1- (14) Years Old is not equal to (≠) WORN OUT...
Because of the simple design of the CASE IH Axial Flow Combines, they can be reconditioned by HOOBER'S expert combine mechanics to like-new condition, so they provide 2nd and 3rd owners years of satisfactory and profitable operation.

LAW #2- (3,500) HOURS PLUS (+) HOOBER RECONDITIONING EQUALS (=) YEARS OF DEPENDABLE SERVICE...
(3,500) Hours on a conventional combine usually means they'll be too much trouble to be dependable. Axial-Flow combines with (3,500) hours, reconditioned by HOOBER'S, have proven to run for years when purchased by farmers in PA, MD, DE and NJ

LAW #3- A CASE IH AXIAL-FLOW COMBINE SERVICED BY EXPERT HOOBER COMBINE MECHANICS EQUALS (=) LITTLE OR NO DOWNTIME DURING HARVEST...
When Hoober's expert combine mechanics service and repair AXIAL-FLOW combines in the off-season, they run dependably through the season.

Bale faster and denser with a "D 1000"

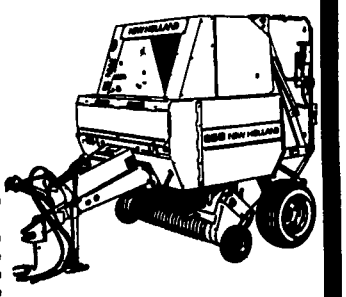
If you want denser square bales while baling at faster speeds, you'll want to take a look at the New Holland "D 1000" mid-size square baler.

The "D 1000" makes bales measuring 2x3x8 feet and weighing up to 700 pounds. Yet, it requires just a 90-horsepower tractor for operation.

According to recent field tests, the New Holland "D 1000" bales more tons per hour compared to conventional square balers. Plus, it lowers hay losses, with an average 15 percent denser bale.

Come in today and see the "D 1000" for yourself . . . from Ford New Holland.

Let us show you a higher-capacity baler



If you need more capacity in your haying operation, the New Holland Model 850 round baler does it better than the rest. Standard features like the exclusive hydraulic density system ensure consistently tight bales. Options like the wide pickup and Fastnet™, the plastic net wrap system, give you even greater speed and capacity. Come in for a demonstration of our higher-capacity baler today.

"565" Baler is faster, tougher

The "565" New Holland square baler from Ford New Holland... redesigned to meet your capacity and quality requirements. Add them up, and you'll see why the New Holland "565" consistently gives you tight, 14x18-inch bales.

But don't take our word for it. Stop in today for a demonstration.

- Wider Super-Sweep pickup . . . a full 16 inches wider than its predecessor.
- Bigger feed opening . . . more than 10 percent more area.
- Stronger feeding system . . . Flow-Action® feeder is beefed-up for long life.
- Stronger materials . . . in the bale case and plunger.
- Gear-driven tying systems . . . wire or twine.

—one quality round bale after another.

Discover Quality...Discover Value...

The Rollant 66 makes fast work of 4'x5' bales. Its unique two-stage pick-up and close tines produce a clean, efficient harvest in less time. Rollatex netting wraps a bale in 10 seconds or less, and double-twine wraps it up in just 20.

The Rollant 46 introduced CLAAS's innovative fixed bale chamber to the marketplace. This versatile baler handles all farm operations from dry hay to silage. Nobody produces a better 4'x4' bale.

The Rollant 42 was designed for family livestock operations. This economical investment produces weather-tight 4'x4' bales for the highest nutrient content possible.

CLAAS bales mean nutrient-filled edible hay, low spoilage, and high crude protein retention.

Each Rollant offers the innovative chamber, low-profile pick-up, and world class dependability. And they all share CLAAS's international reputation for low maintenance, durability and long-life.

AGRICULTURAL RADIALS

KLEBER TIRE CORPORATION: A MICHELIN TIRE CORPORATION DIVISION!!
For years Kleber has been the European leader in agricultural radials, both in original equipment and replacement sales. Now, that same technology is avaialble in the East.

INTRODUCING A NEW FAMILY OF RADIAL FARM TIRES
A front/rear radial tire designed for heavy-high horse power tractors that can improve traction over 15%, while reducing soil compaction! Operating air pressure as low as 8 P.S.I. will dramatically boost your yields

EXCLUSIVE BENEFITS BY DESIGN
What do we say when our customers ask us for the best farm tire we have? (After all, by now he has tried Goodyear, Firestone, Armstrong...). We have a new answer to that old question: Kleber (Pronounced Claybear) Here's why Kleber, a wholly-owned subsidiary of Michelin Tire Corporation has been making radial farm tires since 1952. In Europe (which is 85% radial), Kleber is number one and michelin is number two in both original equipment and replacement farm tires. The immediate benefits farmers will have are:
1. Tremendous traction-after all, Kleber is a minimum of 28% deeper in non-skid. For example, a Kleber 18.4R38 is 64/32nds vs. 51/32nds on any commodity radial made in the U.S.
2. The exclusively patented innerlug system accelerates cleanout, reduced downtime and supplements traction.
3. The unique carcass and belt configuration allows directional stability on the highway even with center hitch equipment. After all, Kleber is designed for road use. It is, in fact, speed rated at 25 mph.
4. And last, in addition to the normal benefits of radials, Kleber's wear is so extended that we have product on main tractor application with ten years of service in 8,000 hours.

WHY KLEBER RADIAL FARM TIRES?
- Lowest Cost per hour
- Highest traction - wet or dry
- Quietest highway transport
- Smoothest ride - no bounce
- Greatest fuel economy
- Most stable center hitch haul
- Lowest uniform soil compaction
- Fastest wet soil clean out

WHAT ARE THE UNIQUE FEATURES THAT MAKE KLEBER HEAD AND SHOULDER ABOVE THE COMPETITION?
- Dual angle bead configuration to insure no slip rim grip
- Bead/sidewall/belt package that provides on/off highway stability
- Non-stretch belts that reinforce the premium bar depth while protecting the radial carcass from field hazards
- Advanced R-1W bar depth to provide extra traction and low cost/hour usage
- Non-stretch belt/carcass design to minimize soil compaction, eliminate pressure spikes and provide uniform wear pattern
- Total design/build techniques to insure stable no bounce ride with center hitch equipment at 45 KPH
- Noise/vibration engineering to optimize bar contour/spacing
- Close technical ties to all tractor manufacturers in the Western World insuring compatibility
- Extensive front wheel assist OE/replacement knowledge world-wide
- In-house research - development staff

MASSEY FERGUSON

Leveling your hills.

The optional Hillside Cleaning System automatically swings the top sieve sideways, against the slope of the hill. This keeps grain spread out evenly for cleaner grain samples.

You get full performance on slopes up to 20%, without the big expense of a hillside combine.

CONCRETE REASONS WHY A NEW POURED CONCRETE SILO IS YOUR BEST INVESTMENT...

"This is the kind of silo you need to protect your valuable feed."

A. Enhancement of cash flow. Improved forage quality results in consistent, and increased milk production.

B. "Safe Silo" Our silos meet or exceed industry standards, reducing/protecting lender liability.

C. Initial Cost. Used or cheap pre-fab silos may have a lower initial cost, but based upon useful life, the new poured concrete silo will have a lower annual cost: due to longer life and lower maintenance costs.

D. Residual Value. Our new, poured concrete silos are built for "generations of use", and enhance the future value of the farm.

E. Storage Losses Reduced. Poured concrete silos consistently out-perform all other methods of storing and preserving the total digestible nutrients in forage crops.

F. Protecting Forage Quality. Oxygen and heat cause the most damage to stored silage and haylage. Our poured concrete silos are the very best system to PROTECT YOUR FORAGE QUALITY... "NOBODY PROTECTS FORAGE QUALITY LIKE WE DO...NOBODY"

GOOD HOOF HEALTH FOR COWS

by Dr. Randy Lyle

The most common problem we see today is cows with sore hooves. You may not know the problem exists until you watch individual cows walk. Observing how cows stand can also provide clues to hoof health. Cows that walk slowly or reluctantly are obvious examples, but also watch for cows that walk with an arched back, cows that shift their weight off of a leg frequently, or cows that stand with rear legs set back. Long, overgrown hooves are an obvious problem.

Why the high incidence of hoof problems? We can blame environment, nutrition, and genetics. Impact of these three factors can be in combination, or just one can lead to a serious problem.

Important aspects of healthy hoof management are:

1. Identify a problem, if it exists. Determine if hoof problems are the result of foot rot or abscesses, laminitis (nutritional founder), or "warts" (may actually be caused by bacterium).
2. Maintain environment as clean and dry as practical. Use a foot bath, regular hoof trimming, well bedded stalls, get cows off concrete when possible.
3. Feed a balanced ration that provides adequate roughage and fiber. Avoid high grain levels, particularly high moisture grains. Don't chop forages too finely.
4. Selection for type traits and appropriate culling of problem cows

If cows can't walk comfortably, they won't perform well. Intensive management may be needed to keep this potential problem under control.
